SOX FANS IN WILD RUSH

Crowds Pour Into Comiskey Park to See Champs in Third Clash; Weather Great

By International News Service.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Thousands of eager and loyal White Sox rooters were in line at Comiskey Park early today to gobble up bleacher and pavilion seats. The lines from the ticket windows extended for several blocks away from the park and were constantly growing.

The Sox arrived here on a special train and some of the players got off at the park. They were closely followed by the Reds and another special carrying some 200 newspaper writers.

At 10 o'clock the weather was bright and the air had an invigorating October tang. Conditions for the getaway are ideal.

Flushed with victory in the first two games and confident they can clean up the Sox in straight games now, the Reds arrived this morning full of ginger. They came like conquering heroes, and so far they are all of that.

"Lefty" Kerr, the surprise pitcher of the Sox staff this season, will probably be sent to the hill top by Kid Gleason.

The Kid has seen his two star hurlers—Cicotte and Williams—battered into submission by the National League champions. He had banked his hopes on these two hurlers, and now his pitching staff weakened, he must trust much to little Dick Kerr and to luck.

Pat Moran is expected to give Hod Eller a crack at the Sox today. The big right-hander is ready to start and looked like the logical selection. The success of the Red southpaws in the first two games may influence Sir Patrick to send Reuther back to the Glesonites in the third game.

The late Harry Pulliam, formerly president of the National League, once said: "Take nothing for granted in baseball."

Just how true those words rang out has been vividly pictured in the winning of two straight from the Sox. Cincinnati has proven rather conclusively that the "dope" is very often the "bunk" for on "dope" the Sox figured to win.

The writer would not be surprised to see the Reds mop up now in five straight games. And unless Kid Gleason and his boys can dig up something to wreck Moran's heavy artillery at train, it will surely run them down in jiffytime.

FITZ WON, DECLARES BURLEN

Recommendation to Unseat Congressman Absurd, Says Election Commission Head

M. W. Burlen, chairman of the City Election Commission, declared today that the charges on which Congressional Elections Committee No. 2 yesterday recommended the unseating of Congressman John F. Fitzgerald in favor of Peter F .Tague were "absurd."

Mr. Burlen insisted that the city commission, which acter as referee after Mr. Tague preferred charges of fraud, gave him every vote to which he was entitled.

"Even if the 200 votes disputed were thrown out, Fitzgerald would still be the choice of the Tenth District," said Chairman Burlen.

Boston backers of Mr. Fitzgerald, who are preparing to support him in his fight for a new election, were eagerly awaiting a statement from Martin Lomasney. Mr. Lomasney, the Democratic leader in Ward 6, was Congressman Fitzgerald's principal supporter. It was in precincts 4, 8 and 9 of his ward that the Congressional committee found alleged evidence of fraud. Mr. Lomasney declined to comment on the situation today.

Mr. Lomasney's henchmen, however, were outspoken in their determination to stick to Fitzgerald. They termed the throwing out of the votes in the Ward 5 precincts as "disfranchisement."

Congressman Robert Luce, the only Massachusetts representative on House Election Committee No. 2, and a Republican, will support Congressman Fitzgerald, according to Washington dispatches. Congressman Luce and Congressman Overstreet of Georgia, Democrat, made the minority report.

The vote of the Congressional committee was 3 to 2. The majority held that the fraud consisted of illegal registration and colonization. Those voting for Mr. Tague were Congressman Goodall of Maine, Lehlbach of New Jersey, Elston of California and Rhodes of Missouri, Republicans, and McGlennon of New Jersey, Democrat.

Mr. Burlen in defending his commission, and its fairness in trying the Tague-Fitzgerald hearing, said: "Mr. Tague's charges of colonization and fraud were not proven before this board. He made charges in more than 200 cases. This board gave him opportunity to prove them, but he failed to do so."

HOW WAR AND FIGHT FOR LEAGUE HAVE WORN ON WILSON

PHOTOS © INTERNATIONAL

President Wilson as he appeared in 1917 at the beginning of his second administration, vigorous and elated over his victory at the polls, but somewhat grave in countenance because of the then impending crisis in this country that led to the declaration of war on Germany. This photo was taken in Washington just before his second inaugural.

Latest picture of the President, taken in San Francisco before his tour for the treaty and league of nations was cut short by his sudden illness. Note the deepened lines about the temples, cheeks and chin and depressions in the neck, indicative of the tremendous strain to which Mr. Wilson has been subjected in the last two and a half years.

DAUGHTERS HURRY TO WHITE HOUSE

By International News Service

Washington, Oct. 3.—Although issuing a bulletin that "the President's condition is unchanged," Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson this afternoon let it be known that the President is for the first time responding to treatment.

He explained that up to the present time the President has chafed continually because he was not allowed to attend to the affairs of state, but now he has begun to "accept the inevitable" and to resign himself to the complete rest that is necessary for his recovery.

"The President's mind is very active and it has been hard to keep him away from the thoughts of his work," Dr. Grayson explained.

The President will be kept in bed until he has gained more strength, it was also stated. He has suffered a slight loss of appetite, and this has had an effect upon his condition.

Dr. Grayson conversed over the telephone with Dr. F. X. Dercum of Philadelphia and stated that the Philadelphia physician would be ready to come at once to Washington at any time it might be felt his presence was needed.

Guards to Remain on Duty at Least Six More Weeks

The State Guards will remain on the streets of Boston for at least six more weeks, according to a responsible officer in the organization today.

This officer stated that the men had been told they would not be released until the police force was recruited back to two-thirds of its normal strength.

The same man declared that some officers in the Commissary Department were "getting ready to feed the men here Thanksgiving Day."

PRESIDENT RESPONDS TO TREATMENT, BUT MUST STAY IN BED

WILSON'S DAUGHTERS HURRY TO THE WHITE HOUSE

Dr. Grayson also took occasion to deny that the President had been subjected to an X-ray examination or that any was contemplated.

He reiterated that the President was in no immediate danger, but that he was "skating on thin ice," and that he, Dr. Grayson, would take no chances. He said there would be two consultations daily with Rear Admiral Stitt of the Naval Hospital, and Dr. Ruffin, who were called in on the case yesterday.

Mrs. William G. McAdoo of New York and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre of Cambridge, daughters of President Wilson, are on their way to their father's bedside.

According to information secured at the White House, the daughters of the chief Executive were not called to Washington. They expressed a desire to come, it is stated, and were told they might do so if they wished.

REFUSE KING'S REQUEST.

The King of Belgium telegraphed to Washington requesting the personal privilege of visiting President Wilson. This request was denied because the President's condition is such that he could not be subjected to the slightest degree of excitement or failure. Official announcement to this effect was made at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, where the royal party is stopping.

Secretary Tumulty let it be known today that he had informed the President of the ratification of the peace treaty by the French Chamber of Deputies yesterday. Also of the defeat in the Senate of the Fall amendments to the treaty. He said the President was greatly heartened by the news.

Messages of confidence were received from all parts of the world, conspicuous among them being cables from President Poincare and Premier Clemenceau of France. There has also been a constant flow of callers at the executive offices to inquire into the condition of the President. Among these were Chief Justice Edward Douglas White and Senator Owen of Oklahoma.

Wilson Sacrificed His Health for the Treaty, Declares Dr. Grayson

By JUSTIN McGRATH.

Washington, Oct. 3.—President Wilson's condition yesterday took a turn for the worse.

The developments were very disturbing to Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, the President's personal physician.

Dr. Grayson felt that he could no longer assume the whole responsibility of the President's case and decided to call in two specialists.

His selections were Dr. F. X. Dercum of Philadelphia, a neurologist whose reputation is international, and Rear Admiral E. R. Stitt, head of the Naval Medical School in Washington.

The announcement that there would be a consultation of specialists was made by Dr. Grayson immediately after he posted a bulletin on the President's condition at 11 a. m.

"CONDITION IS NOT GOOD."

The 11 o'clock bulletin was as follows:

"The President had a fairly good night, but his condition is not at all good this morning."

The statement in the bulletin that the President's "condition is not at all good this morning" was generally construed at the Capitol as indicating that it was bad and created great concern everywhere.

Dr. Dercum arrived in Washington soon after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon and drove immediately to the White House. He reached there about 4:30 and a conference conducted at once to the President's bedroom, where he was joined by Dr. Stitt, who came by ambulance.

Later the specialists were joined by Dr. Sterling Ruffin of Washington.

Dr. Grayson stated that the President was averse to calling in specialists and only yielded when he insisted. One reason why he was anxious to have specialists share his burden of responsibility, Dr. Grayson said, was the President is not afterwing the same willingness usual with him to be bound by Dr. Grayson's admonitions to refrain from concerning himself with public affairs.

NOT OBEDIENT PATIENT.

Dr. Grayson attributes his success with the President in the past to the fact that the President was a most obedient patient, always following the advice of his physician without demur.

But since the President's return from his tour of the country in advocacy of the League of Nations, he has felt that public affairs were making an unavoidable demand upon his attention, and has not been disposed as usual to put them entirely aside in the interests of his own health.

Dr. Grayson gave the injunction that the summoning of specialists should not be construed as indicating that the President's condition was in any way alarming. He said it was merely a precautionary measure which he felt he ought to take.

The President spent most of yesterday in bed. One report at the White House was that he had not gotten up at all, another was that he got up and dressed himself, but around noon he was feeling so badly that he had to go back to bed. It was admitted that he had been in bed all afternoon.

Dr. Grayson appeared much worried when seen just after issuance of the morning bulletin. His distressed appearance may have been due somewhat to the fact that he is said to be not very well himself in consequence of the great strain that has been put upon him since the President became ill.

Dr. Grayson admitted frankly that he was worried.

His chief concern over the condition of the President, he said, was mainly due to the fact that the President is more than sixty years old and has been under a tremendous strain for at least four years.

The President's blood pressure is said to be normal, but there is some concern over the conditions of his arteries on account of his age and the great strain to which he has been subjected.

Dr. Grayson said that the President's vitality was a big one and exhausted, but that it had been drawn upon to such an extent as to need repletion. This could only be accomplished through complete and gradual building up.

The only information obtainable about the President's condition was that obtained from the bulletins issued and from the statments made by Dr. Grayson at the time of their issuance.

Secretary Tumulty and other members of the President's staff, when asked for information, said that all information must come through Dr. Grayson.

President's Illness Traced by Experts to Influenza

New York, Oct. 3.—Intimation that President Wilson is suffering from "frontal sinusitis" is contained in Washington dispatches. Reported diagnosis of his case came after the announcement that Rear Admiral Grayson had summoned to a consultation Dr. Francis Xavier Dercum, world-famous expert on mental and nervous troubles, and Dr. George Edmund de Schweinitz, eminent ear, eye, nose and throat expert, both of Philadelphia.

The American, seeking an authoritative definition of "frontal sinusitis," asked Dr. Royal S. Copeland, health commissioner, for a statement. Dr. Copeland said:

"Frontal sinusitis is an inflammation of the lining membrane of the frontal sinus."

"The frontal sinus is a bony cavity in the skull above the bridge of the nose and over the inner portion of the eye socket.

"The frontal sinus opens into the nasal passage, and this canal, and the sinus itself are both lined with a mucus membrane. They are much the same as the membrane that lines the nasal passages themselves.

"The cause of frontal sinusitis is found usually in an acute cold or in the chronic catarrhal inflammation of the nasal membrane following influenza. The result of the acute cold or catarrhal condition is to produce a swelling of the mucus membrane in the canal leading from the frontal sinus to the nasal cavity. This swelling results in occlusion, or stoppage, of the drainage canal from the sinus to the nose.

PAINFUL HEADACHES.

"When this happens, the secretions of the membrane are dammed and confined in the sinus. The result of this filling up of the sinus is to produce pressure upon the sensitive tissue of the sinus. These symptoms are shown by headaches, which at times are exceedingly painful.

"An interesting thing about the headache is its periodicity. The pain coming about 10 o'clock in the morning, gradually increasing through the day until by late afternoon it becomes almost unbearable. Ordinarily, it disappears in the evening, permitting the patient to sleep reasonably well. But the next day it comes on again.

"These symptoms persist until the acute cold is relieved, or until the influenza subsides, or until treatment has been applied to decrease the swelling of the canal, thus permitting the secretions confined within the sinus to escape normally into the nose.

"Naturally, the location of the pain above and around the eye might lead to the suspicion that there is some trouble in the eye.

DISEASE NOT DANGEROUS.

"Likewise, the location of the pain above the bridge of the nose might lead to the suspicion that there is some disturbance at the base of the brain.

"If the President's trouble is diagnosed as frontal sinusitis, I am happy, as in all human probability the President's symptoms will improve daily, and as soon as the drainage of the canal is effected there will be happy and complete recovery."

Dr. Dercum, of the eminent specialists called by Rear-Admiral Grayson to attend the President, is sixty-three years old. He is professor of mental and nervous diseases at Jefferson Medical College and a member of all the leading medical and philosophical societies.

Ten years ago the great distinction of becoming a member of the Societe de Neurologie of Paris was accorded him. This society is composed of less than fifty members. Only one other American had ever been made a member.

DISTINGUISHED CAREER.

The following interesting data concerning Dr. Dercum is contained in "Who's Who in America" for 1919:

"Dr. Francis Xavier Dercum, neurologist; born, Philadelphia, August 10, 1856. Editor: Text Book on Nervous Diseases by American Authors; described Adiposis Dolorosa (1892-92). Author: Rest, Suggestion and Other Therapeutic Measures in Nervous and Mental Diseases; Clinical Manual of Mental Diseases; Hysteria and Accident Compensation, 1916."

In an earlier volume of "Who's Who," issued in 1912-13, this information concerning Dr. Dercum is given:

"Neurologist to Philadelphia Hospital since 1887; consulting physician Asylum for the Chronic Insane, Wernersville, Pa., since 1893; instructor nervous and mental diseases, University of Pennsylvania, 1893-92; professor same, Jefferson Medical College, since 1892; member American Neurological Association (president 1895-96); A. M. A.; Association American Anatomists; College Physicians, Philadelphia; Philadelphia Neurological Society (president for 1891-92)."

Dr. de Schweinitz is equally as prominent in his line. He has written many books and papers on troubles of the eye, ear, nose and throat. He has been attached to the faculties of the University of Pennsylvania, Jefferson Medical College and the Philadelphia Polyclinic. He is sixty-one years old.

INDICATES BAFFLING SYMPTOMS.

The calling in conjunctively of an eye, throat and nerve specialist to attend President Wilson would indicate the development of baffling symptoms in his condition, say prominent New York specialists. The exact nature of the development, they said, could hardly be told merely from the information contained in the news dispatches.

"It is not uncommon to call in an eye specialist for consultation in nervous diseases," said a physician who is connected with a well-known institution for the treatment of diseases of the eye. "A number of brain diseases manifest their symptoms through the eye. In the case of the President, it would be hard to diagnose the case without knowing more than is contained in the dispatches.

"There is naturally a close affiliation between the eyes and the nerve centres," said another prominent eye specialist. "A nervous affliction that affected the eyes principally might originate at the nerve centres, and again the state of the eyes might serve as a clear indication of deeper disorders. It's hard to tell without knowing the case. I would think from the dispatches, though, that there are possibilities of grave developments in the President's case."

"The circumstances would tend to show a change of some gravity when both eye and nerve specialists are called in," said a leading New York neurologist, "which could say, of course, without knowing the case and its definite history. It's entirely possible that some baffling symptom may have developed. But the fact of the two being called indicates no special circumstances or conditions."

BRITISH UNIONS SEND MESSAGE TO AMERICA

Same Spirit That Holds Ireland Down Is Shown to Strikers, Says J. H. Thomas

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 3.—J. H. Thomas, executive secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, and leader of Great Britain's greatest strike, today sent the following message to American labor:

"The same governmental spirit is operating now as operated in the invasion of Russia and the refusal to grant liberties to the people of Ireland.

"The same Camarilla that has already outraged the sense of justice in these two matters is behind this attempt to crush trade unionism and bring down wages.

"I am profoundly satisfied there is no danger of a revolution. I am the only one who can avert it. The government has demanded unconditional surrender. I could not see the men beaten and there will be unconditional surrender only over my dead body.

"COUNTRY WILL GO TO SMASH."

"If the strike confines another week the country will go to smash. Delegates representing 5,000,000 trade unionists say we are right in rejecting unconditional surrender.

"That Camarilla, to a certain extent, represents the last remains of British feudalism entrenching itself in the Cabinet. Amongst them are examples of the sort of Englishman whose self-complacence enables him to say that a small ruling class need not head the perils in which they may place the nation.

"Since the Versailles treaty there has been a feeling that wages must be reduced and the American exchange rate must be raised.

"Unfortunately there have endeavored to restore normal conditions by the worst possible means—by ascertaining the standard of life of the poorest workers.

"WILL NOT COME BACK."

When the union leaders left the residence of Lloyd George at 2 o'clock an official of the coal miners said: "We will not come back again."

Another member of the delegation said the situation was still hopeful.

While the delegates were on their way back to Caxton Hall three lorries filled with soldiers passed through Whitehall and were hissed by the crowds.

An urgent call for 2,000 volunteers to work on buses in London was posted on the blackboard in the stock exchange.

Secretary Bromley, of the Locomotive engineers' organization predicts a long and bitter struggle between trade unions generally and the government.

BUCKLEY GETS 4 YEARS IN AUTO THEFTS

Prominent Sporting Man Convicted of Hiring Boys to Steal Cars

John J. Buckley, thirty, prominent in boxing circles, was today sentenced to from fourto four and one-half years at State Prison by Judge O'Connell in the Middlesex County Superior Court at East Cambridge.

He was convicted on one indictment charging him with receiving stolen property. There are twenty-three other indictments against him.

Buckley, whose wife and t[illegible] dren live in Somerville, was [illegible]ested as a result of the big raid at Billerica, where several alleged auto thieves were taken into custody.

In addressing the court for sentence, Assistant District Attorney George Stanley Harvey asserted that Buckley had procured boys to steal automobiles for him, and that many of these youths are now serving time in jails. He said that Buckley has confessed, and had aided the government. Because of the serious epidemic of organized auto thievery, he moved for a substantial sentence.

Senator Edward A. Counihan, counsel for Buckley, asked that Buckley be sent to the House of Correction. Judge O'Connell said that he considered Buckley's offence a very grave one, and he was determined to impose the maximum punishment.

I. W. W. LEADER HELD AS 'RED' AGITATOR

Accused of Giving Out Literature Calling for Overthrow of Government

Joseph J. Jones of Shawmut avenue was arraigned before Judge Hayden in the Roxbury Court today, charged with violations under the new anti-anarchy bill. It is one of the few instances in which a charge of this kind has been made.

It is contended by the police that Jones, who bears credentials as an I. W. W. delegate, was distributing literature on Tremont street, near Lenox street, which was agitating the overthrow of the government.

Jones was in court a few days ago on the charge of distributing literature. Today the new charges were added. He pleaded not guilty and the case was continued until October 15.

JEWISH GREETINGS TO CAPTAIN SULLIVAN

Captain James F. Sullivan of City Hall Station, "the friend of the newsboys," today received a card upon which was printed in Jewish: "A wish for a Happy New Year." The card was signed by Phil, "Moe" and "Jake," newsboys. It was while the three young men were American newsboys that their acquaintance with Captain Sullivan ripened into friendship.

MAYOR HYLAN EXTENDS FREEDOM OF NEW YORK TO BELGIAN KING

IS GIVEN KEY TO CITY

Crowds Hail Albert With Queen and Crown Prince Along Busy Streets

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 3.—King Albert of Belgium was made a citizen of New York at noon today, when Mayor Hylan, formally welcoming him for the city, presented him the freedom of the city in the aldermanic chamber of City Hall.

In halting English, King Albert replied that he prized the honor New York was conferring upon him, far too warmly for him to adequately express. He had hardly finished his brief speech when the more than 3,000 city dignitaries and prominent citizens crowding the chamber broke into a cheer for the King that was echoed outside in the City Hall by the throng that jammed City Hall Park.

CHEERED BY MULTITUDE.

From the Battery to Chambers street, the multitude that lined the sidewalks and blocked traffic despite the cordons of police caught up the shout and "Hip, hip, hurray for Albert of Belgium!" was the one cry that rang throughout downtown New York.

Cheers for the Queen, cheers for the Crown Prince and cheers for the Belgian people were given with a vim that brought smiles to the King's serious, rather sad, face. The Queen, too, standing on his left on the dias in the aldermanic chamber, was unable to resist the joyousness of the shouts. She broke into a merry little laugh that caused her to raise her heavy white veil for the first time in public since she landed at Hoboken yesterday. As for Prince Leopold, his grin of happiness was as broad as that of any likeable, jolly American youngster of eighteen years of age.

PAYS NEW YORK TRIBUTE.

Directly after the ceremonies at City Hall the royal party was escorted outside the building by Mayor Hylan, the police fighting with the crowds to find room for the King and Queen to reach their limousines parked at the base of the City Hall stairs.

In a few minutes they were whisked over to Park row, up Lafayette street, through Eighth street and then up Fifth avenue to the Waldorf, where luncheon was served in the royal suite.

In parting King Albert said:

"I prize highly this moment of receiving the freedom of the city because I know what an important part the government of municipalities play in Belgium. New York is indeed worthy of her position as the greatest metropolis of a great country. We both feel very deeply the generosity of your reception today."

The King and Queen landed at Pier A, the Battery, at 11:45 o'clock from the yacht Noma, which Rodman Wanamaker recently purchased from Vincent Astor. They were received at the pier by Mr. Wanamaker, heading the Hylan's reception committee. South Ferry was one huge block of humanity. A vast roar of welcome went up as the King was seen driving up Broadway in the machine with Mr. Wanamaker.

At 3:20 o'clock this afternoon, 50,000 school children greeted the King and Queen in the Mall at Central Park, where, after the ceremonies, the King planted a tree.

Tonight he is expected to visit the Hippodrome.

MAY MEAN END OF TOWBOAT STRIKE

Quick settlement of the strike of towboat engineers, which began Wednesday, resulting in the crippling of the movements of more than 100 ocean-going tugs engaged in moving coal, sand and lumber-carrying barges along the coast is reported as likely.

The air has been cleared by the action of the United States Shipping Board in notifying the headquarters of the unions of engineers and masters, mates and pilots, that a conference would be called at once in Washington to go over the disputed points and attempt to arrive at satisfactory solution of the difficulty.

A continuation of the strike for any length of time will curtail to a serious degree the receipts of waterborne coal from Southern ports to Boston, creating a fuel shortage that will hit many homes. This consideration is believed to have prompted efforts to end the strike.

SKULL IS FRACTURED BY A FALLING CLINKER

Diodoro Zupper, aged 55 years, of No. 142 R street, South Boston, was struck by a clinker which fell from the staging of a building where the injured man was working, at K and First streets. eH was removed to the City Hospital with a fractured skull.

ARKANSAS RACE RIOT QUELLED BY TROOPS

More Than 150 Held Prisoners in Elaine; Two Negroes Killed

Helena, Ark., Oct. 3.—The situation at Elaine, where race riots have raged since Tuesday, was reported "satisfactory," in a message received here at noon today from the military authorities in charge of troops in the riot zone.

The message confirmed an earlier report that two negroes had been killed during a battle with troops in the southern part of Phillips County last night.

More than 150 prisoners are held at Elaine, for participation in the riots.

Government agents are said to have uncovered evidence of a well organized negro uprising. O. S. Bratton, a white man arrested in connection with the murder of W. A. Adkins, special officer, was closely questioned, but denied knowledge of the plot.

Seventy-five negroes are understood told the authorities of the activities of a white man who for the past two months has been "organizing the negroes to oppose their white employers."

Governor Charles E. Brough, who was fired at by negro rioters late yesterday, has ordered through investigation of a negro farmer organization suspected of being back of the plot for the uprising.

SPRINGFIELD GIVES MERCIER BIG WELCOME

Springfield, Oct. 3. — Springfield did honor to Cardinal Mercier of Belgium today when thousands of citizens escorted him from the railway station to City Hall, where he was welcomed by the Mayor. Afterward the cardinal was the guest at a luncheon.

Miss Theresa Curtin of Medford was the first freshman of Boston University to chalk the sophomore numerals, 1922, along the middle of Garrison street, today at the initiation ceremony of the College of Secretarial Science of Boston University. Other freshmen followed suit.

The freshmen were led in snake formation along Huntington avenue, down Irvington street to the South Armory and back, the same way. Walking back down Garrison street they jumped over the numerals of their big sisters, the sophomores.

The girls made a striking picture as they went along, placarded with their title, "Freshies," and large bows of different colored ribbon under their chins.

Miss Cordelia McLennan of Quincy, president of the class of secretarial science sophomores, devised the fete for the initiation of the younger girls. Other officers are Miss Grace Dineen of North Easton, vice-president; Mildred Dunn of Pembroke, secretary; Dorris Turner of Wollaston, treasurer.

Using the backstairs at Boston University, the freshmen, curtseying, allowed the sophomores to precede them into class. These observances of deference continued throughout the day at the College of Secretarial Science.

BARRY NOW ELIGIBLE IN POSTMASTER RACE

Lieutenant-Colonel John J. Barry, mentioned as a possible candidate for postmaster of Boston, today said he was not aware activities had been going on in his behalf. He made application last April for the position, too late to be considered. However, since that time, the list has been thrown open to veterans of the late war, so he is now eligible. Barry is in charge of the postoffice garage.

GOLDBERG UP AGAIN FOR CLOTHING THEFTS

Israel Goldberg, aged 22, of Harrison avenue, was arraigned before Judge Hayden in the Roxbury Court for the third consecutive day on charges of larceny and receiving stolen goods, from William Smyth Co. 8 Winter street, Boston. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $1,000 for the grand jury. The police visited Goldberg's store on Washington street, Roxbury, and confiscated about $10,000 worth of goods, supposed to have been stolen in recent robberies at the North and South stations.

Repeal Section of Constitution Declaring Against Walkouts Being Considered

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 3.—The 25,000 members of the National Federation of Postal Employes, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, are voting on a proposal to repeal a section of their constitution which declares against strikes, it was learned today.

If the proposition is carried by the referendum, it may lead, it was stated, to the adoption of a strike policy by the union employes to enforce demands when less drastic method fail.

James W. Cavanaugh, president of the Boston branch of postal employes' association, today refused to make any comment on the report from Washington on the proposed repeal of a section of the association's constitution which declares against strikes.

HARVARD FUND HERE TOTALS $890,000

Greater Boston District Passes New York on Third Day of Race

Boston passed New York in the Harvard Endowment Fund drive, Reports from the Greater Boston district showed collections of $890,000 to date, while the New York teams had only reported $825,000, on the opening of the third day of the drive. team leaders were confident that the Greater Boston goal of $5,000,000 toward the national total of $15,250,000 would be reached. The figures for the country today were $7,007,545.

One of the features of the Boston campaign has been that donations aggregating $250,000 have been made by persons not Harvard men at all. Reports from other sections of the country also indicate that others than Harvard alumni are taking a lively interest in the success of the drive.

Boston's revised figures show $175,000 in voluntary gifts, and $715,000 collected through teams. There were two $25,000 subscriptions within the last few hours, one of $15,000 and two of $5,000.

The men directing the Greater Boston drive will attend the progress meeting in New York next Wednesday, and hope to be able to report that they are still leading the country. A "100 per cent. subscription list" is the goal of the canvassers. There are 11,000 Harvard graduates in the Greater Boston district.

The last totals given out, which are incomplete, are as follows:

Greater Boston	$890,000
Greater New York	825,000
Delaware	18,000
District of Columbia	32,500

NO SYMPATHY STRIKE AT QUINCY

Fore River Branch of Bethlehem Steel Company Has Contract With Employes

To allay rumors that a sympathy strike was possible at the Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, H. P. Ladley, assistant to General Manager Wakeman, today issued the following statement:

"In reply to many queries and rumors, which have been in circulation regarding the relations between the management and the men at the Fore River plant, Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, located in Quincy, it will probably well at this time to state that the many articles in the press concerning the situation at the Bethlehem Fore River Company do not in any way include the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, which is a distinct organization with its own management and operating force and should not be confounded with the Bethlehem Steel Company in the present discussion.

"The following is a brief summary of the conditions surrounding the labor situation at the Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation:

"The Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor and the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Ltd., signed an agreement on January 17, 1919, which established methods and procedure whereby all questions of wages, hours and working conditions would be adjusted as in the following paragraph quoted from this agreement:

UNION OFFICERS CAN ATTEND.

"The international committee and the company's committee shall jointly hear, or consider, all grievances or other questions affecting wages, hours of labor or working conditions which have failed of adjustment, and any other matters as to which such joint consideration will tend to avoid misunderstandings or will improve the condition of the industry and of its employees. Any officer representing a union shall have the right to be present at a hearing on the subject of which the interests of his organization are especially concerned, or to confer with the committees sitting jointly on any question which in his judgment requires consideration or adjustment.

"The men at the Fore River plant are represented by committees, one chosen by them for each of the various crafts and any and all grievances or conditions which they may desire to bring to the attention of the management are taken up, and adjustments made as the various cases may warrant.

NO STRIKE BEING CONSIDERED.

"After going over with these representative men the many confusing and conflicting statements appearing in the press, these men, together with the management, feel that it is getting at this time to inform the public through the press that the conditions at this plant are harmonious and amicable, and that at this time no question of strike is being considered."

All Pittsburgh Operators Agree With Judge Gary That Strike Will Settle Itself

By International News Service.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 3.—Judge Elbert Gary's flat statement to the Senate investigation committee in Washington that "if you leave the situation alone it will settle itself" seemed to go to the whole attitude of steel operators in the Pittsburgh district. Judge Gary added, it was generally admitted in steel circles today, not only for the U. S. Steel Corporation, but also for the other big operators in this district who are standing with and looking to the corporation for guidance in the struggle.

"The strike is on, you bet, it was said at the office of one big steel concern today. "Nor will it be for some time. But we are making progress. We have more men every day since September 22 when the strike was inaugurated."

So far few, if any, preparations have been made for the visit of the committee to Pittsburgh except by the strikers' national headquarters. The strikers are completing their plans, getting affidavits and lining up the data from their side of the matter to present to Senator Kenyon and his associates. The operators have practically done nothing.

SALEM MILLS REJECT ENDICOTT AS ARBITER

Salem, October 3.—Henry B. Endicott is not acceptable to the Naumkeag Mills management as an arbiter in the strike of the company's 1650 employes, it was announced today. The statement was made in a letter from Agent J. Foster Smith of the company to Business Agent John J. O'Connell for the Textile Operatives' Union. None of the striking operatives are going to other textile cities for work.

No reservations will be made for the pontifical mass at the Holy Cross cathedral, Sunday, to be attended by King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium and Cardinal Mercier, except those for the official parties, the rector announced today.

Numerous requests for reserved seats at the mass had been received in the rectory. It was decided not to make reservations other than those for the King and Queen and their suite, the Governor and his staff, Mayor Curley, the rest of the cabins will be open to the public.

I. W. W. HELPED START STEEL STRIKE

Labor Leader Tighe so Informs Senators; Questioned by Walsh About Foreigners

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Officers of the I. W. W. were partly responsible for the steel strike, Michael Tighe, of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers, told the Senate Investigating Committee this afternoon.

"I. W. W. men were saying, 'The A. F. of L. has soft pedaled you again,' said Tighe. "The men were beginning to listen to those appeals. It was the I. W. W. movement, that made the postponement of the strike impossible, and this movement had to be met, Tighe said.

The real reason for the strike, Tighe declared, was Judge Gary's refusal to give a conference to the union leaders.

On October 1 there were 343,000 steel workers on strike, Tighe declared.

"It was an 80 per cent strike, as far as the mills of the United States Steel Corporation," Mr. Hobbs counted for the strikers, declared.

Daniel Reid of the United States Steel Corporation, argued that the committee inquire whether Tighe could show that an advertisement calling for foreign laborers was paid for by or authorized by the Steel Corporation.

"Well, who would pay for that advertisement?" he interjected. Afterward Hobbs, counsel for the strikers.

"I wouldn't speculate as to that," said Reid.

"Well, there is too much speculation on your side anyway," retorted Hobbs.

"Do you make the charge that there has been a constant increase of foreign labor in the steel mills?" asked Senator Walsh of Massachusetts.

"I do not," replied Tighe.

"At Union mills we have never given attention to what seems to be the paramount issue here as the corporation is concerned, the open shop," Tighe added.

Tighe went into great detail relative to the history of attempts to organize steel workers. He read an advertisement which appeared in a Pittsburgh paper in 1918 asking for employes for the steel mills and which stated "Assyrians, Serbs and Russians preferred."

This Tighe said, was an example of how the Steel Corporation had taken foreigners into the industry in preference to Americans. He declared that the Steel Corporation's employees predominated the steel industry now.

VON TIRPITZ INSISTS THAT GERMANY SOUGHT TO AVOID WORLD WAR

THE KAISER NEVER BELIEVED ENGLAND WOULD FIGHT

VON TIRPITZ MEMOIRS
By ALFRED VON TIRPITZ,
Grand Admiral of the German Navy

Chance, which in a certain sense is symbolical of the tragedy of the world war, decreed that the text of the new Anglo-German colonial agreement was sent over to our London Ambassador, Prince Lichnowsky, in its final form for his signature on the very day of the declaration of war. The ill will of the entente powers aga inst Germany ought at no moment to have been underestimated, but in spite of this the situation was not lost for German diplomacy when the Serbian challenge was sent to Austria in 1914.

It only had to be handled frankly, and at the right moment. An immediate request from our Kaiser to the Czar of Russia, asking the latter to assist in obtaining satisfaction for Austria, might have been successful and, at least, would have favorably influenced our political situation. So far as Germany was concerned, there never was for a moment a menace to the world in any German will for war, but it rested solely on the fatal mediocrity of our office-holding politicians.

On July 5, 1914, the Austrian Ambassador handed to the Kaiser at Potsdam the letter from Emperor Francis Joseph which had been brought to Berlin by Count Royos, chief of the Austro-Hungarian Cabinet, by direction of the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, Count Berchtold, together with a memorandum to Serbia, which had been drawn up for transmission before the Archduke Francis Ferdinand had been assassinated. I was in Tarasp taking the baths at the time, but I was reliably informed the letter stated that the threads of the conspiracy against the Austrian throne reached to Belgrade; that the Austrian government would approach Serbia with a demand for the fullest satisfaction, and that, if this were not given, would march her troops into Serbia.

Kaiser William, with his chivalrous feelings, promised loyalty and support against the Serbian murderers, in reply to the Austrian Emperor's personal request. According to statements made by the Kaiser to my deputy in the park of the Potsdam New Palace on the morning of July 6, the Kaiser did not consider intervention by Russia in protest in behalf of Serbia as probable, because he was convinced the Czar would not support the assassins of royalty and moreover, Russia at the time was militarily and financially unfit for a war.

The Kaiser proceeded to argue, in somewhat sanguine fashion, that France would put the brakes on Russia because of France's unfavorable financial position and her shortage of heavy artillery. The Kaiser did not even mention England. There was no thought in his mind of complications with this State. Thus the Kaiser himself regarded any far-reaching dangers as improbable. He hoped Serbia would give way, but considered it necessary to be prepared for any other issue of Austro-Serbian settlement.

For this reason he summoned, July 5, 1914, Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, Minister of War von Falkenhayn, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs Zimmermann and the chief of the military cabinet, General von Lyncker. It was decided that measures calculated to arouse political attention or to incur special expenses were to be avoided. After this decision the Kaiser went on his previously planned Scandinavian voyage, on the advice of the Chancellor. It was the Chancellor's constitutional duty and his supreme obligation to examine the promises to Austria from the political standpoint of Germany's interests and to keep its execution in hand.

The Chancellor approved the Kaiser's decision, assuming, as he did, that Austria's crumbling position as a great power would go to pieces if it did not receive any satisfaction from the acquisitive Serbian state. The secretary of the Russian certain also may have had some influence. I was not informed about the political activities of the Kaiser during the Scandinavian voyage. I have reasons to believe, however, that he did not notice any grave danger to the world's peace.

When the Kaiser, at any time, did not consider that the peace of the world was really threatened, he was led to give full play to the sabre-rattling of his famous ancestors. But in moments which he realized as critical, on the other hand, he proceeded with extraordinary caution. If the Kaiser had remained in Berlin, and if the normal government machinery had been at work then, in spite of his sporadic dealings with the foreign policy, he would probably have found ways and means of avoiding the danger of war about the middle of the month.

However, because the chief of the general staff, the Minister of War, the chief of the admiralty staff and myself were kept away from Berlin during the succeeding days, the business was monopolized by the Chancellor, who, having no experiences himself of the great European world, was unable to estimate correctly the value of his collaborators in the foreign office. The Chancellor, at any rate, did not write to me for advice. The events of that July, and particularly Germany's part in them, have been now so completely exposed by a series of partly official publications, that it does not seem to me to be in Germany's interests any longer for me to conceal my opinion.

(Editor's note: Prince Lichnowsky revealed during the war the diplomatic secrets as he knew them when he was ambassador to London, and, following the overthrow of the Imperial German government, Herr Karl Kautsky was delegated as official ransacker of the Wilhelmstrasse archives to give to the then-awakened German people the inside story of German diplomacy. This he did to the accompaniment of full publicity.)

As early as July 11 the Berlin foreign office was convinced that the Entente had advised Belgrade to give way, though I learned this some years afterwards. In this the Chancellor had the means whereby to untie the knot. He drew, however, from the assumption that the Entente did not want war, the short-sighted conclusion that Austria could probably force an entrance into Serbia, regardless of the Entente, and without endangering the peace of the world. I knew nothing of the fact that having advised Belgrade to keep peace, as was optimistically assumed in the Wilhelmstrasse at this time. It strikes me as peculiar today that the Entente has not been able to bring forward conclusive documents proving its intervention in Belgrade in the interests of peace.

The Serbian murder, indeed, could not be well countenanced by any civilized state. When I received that communication in Tarasp, my first impression was that this ultimatum was unacceptable to the Serbians, and might easily lead to a world war. I never believed in the possibility of localizing the Austro-Serbian passage-at-arms, with regard to Russia, any more than I had any faith in England's neutrality in a continental war.

I wrote to my deputy in this sense, and recommended an agreement with the Czar. This suggestion had no effect. I saw that the danger of the situation lay particularly in the fact that England formed the final link in the Entente chain. It was only the clumsiness of our policy which brought the Russian military party to the top, and made it possible for the Russian Minister of War, General Soukhomlinoff, to deceive the Czar.

Russia certainly had no right to make war out of the chastisement of Belgrade, but the danger that powerful Russian influences might demand a war ought not to have been underestimated. I was convinced, even before the Austrian ultimatum, that the war party in Petrograd could be held in check if we treated the Czar in confidence, whereas, if we acted to directly, then we might almost certainly reckon that England would let loose a world war in conformity with the century-old political tradition of the maintenance of a continental "balance of power."

I told Prince Henry at that time about the slumbering English will to war, when he visited me in Tarasp in the middle of July. My views were shared by the Minister of State, Herr Vlochelli, and the Saxon Ambassador, Reinhold von Salza and Lichtenau, who were both staying there.

The Austrian ultimatum was handed to the Serbian government on July 23, when it was originally agreed that it was to be presented on the 16th. Vienna had postponed the event in order to wait for the departure from Petrograd of President Poincare of France, who was working for war.

This postponement was regretted in Berlin because it led to the fading of the fresh impression of the assassination, and consequently of the motive for intervention. This difference of Berlin and Vienna was dominated by the desire of both to maintain the peace of the world, and they only differed in their views as to the method —of how to tackle the Serbian wasp's nest so as not to endanger peace. Berlin's standpoint was probably more correct.

Continued Tomorrow.

Following the foregoing revelations of the Austro-German policy, which never before have been put on public record, in discussions of the causes of the war, Admiral von Tirpitz, in his next instalment, takes up the successive steps toward the world-conflict played by Russia, England, France and Italy. He proceeds to couple his intimate acquaintance of the facts of the genesis of the war from the German side with a remarkable series of contentions and apologies for the German Empire's course, the whole constituting a new insight into the policy of the present agitators in Germany, who are intent on re-establishing the rule of the war party. His revelations are sure to arouse discussion and disputes in all quarters at which their recital is aimed by the former grand admiral of the German war fleet.

BANDITS KIDNAP U. S. ENGINEER IN MEXICO

Rebels Overpower Soldiers Guarding Plantation; Demand 10,000 Pesos Ransom

By Universal Service.

New York, Oct. 3.—Information of the kidnaping of another American by Mexican bandits has just been received at the headquarters of the National Association for the protection of American rights in Mexico. The information was contained in a Mexico City newspaper, the Excelsior, under date of September 23.

Rebels, it said, overpowered a small detachment of soldiers guarding the San Francisco plantation in the State of Vera Cruz, and carried off the manager, Jose Sains, and the engineer, an American named Spiller, demanding 10,000 pesos as ransom.

The Mexican government was said to have sent troops in pursuit of the kidnappers.

Lieutenant-Colonel, 38 Years in Service, Seeks a Job

New York, Oct. 3. — The Reemployment Bureau for Soldiers, Sailors and Marines here is hunting for a job that would suit a lieutenant-colonel with thirty-eight years of army service behind him.

The lieutenant-colonel, whose name is withheld from publication, as are those of all applicants, personally requested the service to help him. He accepted a commission in the army immediately after graduating from Columbia University with the degree of medical doctor.

In those days it was not necessary for a physician to have a license to practice medicine and now that the officer wishes to return to civil life he will not be able to follow his profession because of the new law.

MRS. MARIA BARTHOLOW IS BURIED IN LOWELL

Concord, Oct. 3. — The funeral of Mrs. Maria (Walker) Bartholow, widow of Dr. Roberts Bartholow, professor emeritus of the Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, was held today in the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. W. Duston, on Muskatquid road, Concord, with the Rev. Smith Owen Dexter, rector of the Trinity Episcopal Church of Concord, officiating. The body was taken to Lowell for burial. Mrs. Bartholow, who died Tuesday, was eighty-four years old.

N. E. FACES CUT IN SUGAR FOR 3 MONTHS

Supply 25 Per Cent. Below Normal, with Increase in Candy Making

New England must get along, for three months at least, with twenty-five per cent. less than its normal consumption of sugar.

Brigadier-General John H. Sherburne, chairman of the commission on necessaries of life, stated today that the available supply of sugar for New England is just about 25 per cent. short, the shortage being due in part to a largely increased demand for sugar for candy-making, in part to making up the deficiency in last year's supply, but chiefly to a greatly increased consumption over normal.

During the past nine months, he said, the consumption of sugar has been far more than was ever known before. During that period, shipments into New England totalled 191,000 tons, as compared with 145,866 tons during the same period in 1918, but the consumption has increased so greatly that a serious shortage is impending.

N. E. SUPPLIED FIRST.

Asked about the rumors that large amounts of sugar refined in this vicinity have been shipped abroad, General Sherburne said the Sugar Equalization Board has an arrangement with the Royal Commission under which a certain portion of the Cuban crop is allotted to England. Part of England's sugar is refined here, but the New England supply is not at all diminished because of this, as the refineries use only their surplus capacity on England's sugar, and they are able to handle all that is consigned to them for New England consumption.

Not more than 700 tons out of New England's supply has gone abroad, and these shipments were due to a mistake made last July, when the supply was overestimated and the demand underestimated. These shipments have been ended, however, and New England will retain hereafter all the sugar intended for it.

With reference to plans for meeting the shortage conditions, General Sherburne said a voluntary committee has been organized in the sugar trade, the duty of which will be to equalize allotments among wholesalers and supply men. Sugar cards have been considered, but with the appreciation in the hands of the commission it will be impossible to inaugurate an efficient card method, and none will be used unless it is made absolutely necessary.

URGES COAL ORDERS NOW.

General Sherburne said the commission is not alarmed over the coal situation, but it is certain that there will be no reduction in price before next Spring, and therefore it advises everyone to place orders at once for such coal as will be needed during the Winter, in order that dealers may know just what their needs are to be.

With respect to prices of general commodities, General Sherburne says the commission has found that since September 9, when its first fair price list was issued, pork products have dropped about 10 per cent. in price, beef 8 per cent., and general groceries an average of 6 3-10 per cent. He expects there will be a further advance in butter and eggs, but for other commodities the commission expects to find a steady decline in prices.

WOMAN URGES G. O. P. TO SUPPORT MATERNITY BILL

Miss Edna Lawrence Spencer of Cambridge presented the following resolution to the committee of the Republican party in support of the Spencer bill, an act to care for mothers during maternity:

"Believing that the first duty of a State is to safeguard the health and happiness of the people who inhabit it, we favor the immediate enactment of legislation for noncontributory maternity benefits to protect mothers and children during the maternity period and forever to prevent the placing of the stigma of pauperism upon the holy state of motherhood."

RAYMOND'S CLOTHING

MORE ROOM SOON

Housetalking something's got to be done. Last Saturday was the wust yet. The biggest day in the history of this business. The way our friends piled in here from morning till night made me queasy; (look it up, damfino) couldn't do a darn thing withem; you'd think there was no other place in town to buy anything just a scrabble for goods. Wonder why? There must be a reason. People don't go to a store simply because it's a store; when they leave home they know where they're going and they know why. People with good old fashioned horse sense can't be fooled with meretricious show (look this up too) fancy fixtures and hot air conceived and written by the yard by irresponsible hired professionals. They believe a Democratic store can helpem more'n a trytobenicestore and after one bite they know it.

LET "DANDERINE" SAVE YOUR HAIR

Check ugly dandruff! Stop hair coming out and double its beauty

A little "Danderine" cools, cleanses and makes the feverish, itchy scalp soft and pliable; then this stimulating tonic penetrates to the famished hair roots, revitalizing and invigorating every hair in the head, thus stopping the hair falling out, or getting thin, dry or fading.

After a few applications of "Danderine" you seldom find a fallen hair or a particle of dandruff, besides every hair shows new life, vigor, brightness, more color and thickness.

A few cents buys a bottle of delightful "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter.

MAIL ORDERS FOR ARMY FOOD UP TO 15,000

Hundreds Wait in Line Four Hours for Opening of Sale at South Boston

The army retail stores at the supply base in South Boston was rushed today with business. Ten thousand orders, mostly for food, were received by the mail order department alone.

The cash and carry department did not open until 12:30 p. m., but several hundred customers were at the supply base at 8 a. m., expecting the store to open at that hour. Most of them waited in line for four hours.

A strenuous effort is being made by the mail order department to keep pace with its job. Today fifty-five new clerks were added to the office force, the office itself extended twenty feet, and new roller carriages installed between the packing and mailing rooms, and twenty-five new packers employed. The postal department also has increased its force. Lieutenant-Colonel H. B. Harry, in charge of mail orders, appealed to the public to be patient if they did not receive their orders promptly. The mail orders today bring the total to 15,000.

DON'T SEND PERSONAL CHECKS.

Certified checks or postal money orders are the preferred form of remittances with orders. Personal checks are not accepted. Of those orders in today's mail 500 contained personal checks. Three clerks are engaged solely in returning these.

Surprising carelessness was reported of persons enclosing cash with their orders. Many of these letters contained only the name of the district or town where the remitter lived, others had neither street address nor town. The officers in charge now have a number of orders with the cash, but do not know where to send the articles ordered.

Yesterday's business amounted to $12,700 in the cash and carry branch, the record for any single day since the store opened. It was estimated that 15,000 customers were served during the day.

PROVIDENCE TO HAVE STORE.

Reclaimed men's shoes will be placed on sale in a few days at $2.50 and $3 a pair. Although many of these shoes have been half soled and otherwise repaired, all are in good condition.

Women's shoes also may be sold at the supply base next week. A consignment of army nurses' shoes has been assigned to the Boston base by the Quartermaster Department.

A reclamation bureau for lost arsage has been opened at the base with Captain Holliday in charge. A number of purchasers have left their orders and failed to return after paying for them. These may be recovered at the office of E. P. Torpey.

Four thousand customers visited the Worcester branch of the retail stores Thursday. The store in Providence will be opened Monday.

The supply of rice in the cash and carry department has been exhausted, although a considerable amount is still held by the mail order branch.

Tomorrow the store will open at 9:30 a. m. and close at 1 p. m.

POSTAL SAVINGS FORGER GETS 3 YEARS IN PRISON

Thomas Bilhauski, alias Thomas Murray, of Billerica, was arraigned before Judge Morton in the United States District Court today and sentenced to three years in the Atlanta Penitentiary. H. H. Rogers' Heiress Sued for $1300 Board Bill

Newport, R. I., Oct. 3.—Mrs. Rogers Benjamin Pratt, the heiress who divorced Alexander Dallas Bache Pratt, scion of one of the oldest New York families, has been sued for a board bill.

A suit to recover $1,300 for board and room was brought here by the Virginia Hot Springs Company, conducting the Homestead Hotel, through its counsel, Green, Hinckley & Allen of Providence.

Mrs. Pratt, who left some days ago for her Park avenue, New York, residence, recently suffered a reduction in her allowance, from $1,000 a week to $1,000 a month, it is understood.

Earlier this Summer there were rumors that Mrs. Pratt was to marry Preston Gibson, Newport and New York society diseussed these rumors, but nothing came of them. Mrs. Pratt was at Newport during the Summer. She inherited her fortune, which is large, from her grandfather, the late Henry H. Rogers.

STATE GUARDS TO SEE GAME AT HARVARD

Crimson A. A. Co-operates With Y. M. C. U. Service Unit in Offering Entertainment

The Harvard Athletic Association has invited members of the State Guard now on duty in Boston to be its guests at the Harvard-Boston College football game in the Stadium tomorrow.

This invitation was extended in connection with the program of entertainment for guardsmen arranged by the Service Unit of the Y. M. C. Union, acting in co-operation with the morale officer of division headquarters, Captain R. E. Stone.

In the same connection the B. F. Keith management will give a big show in the Boston Theatre at 2 p. m. Sunday, with headline attractions from the Keith theatres. A limited number of officers and men of the State Guard will be guests of the management on this occasion.

In addition to these events, the Service Unit has arranged a nightly program of the same type as those given by this organization during the war. Instructive as well as entertaining motion pictures are used, make singing is an important feature, and phases of patriotism and citizenship are included in every program.

On Wednesday night the Service Unit entertained an audience at the Charlestown Armory under Y. M. C. A. auspices, last night at the old City Club on Beacon street, and tonight will hold forth in the Municipal Building at South Boston.

15 DENY SIGNING SULLIVAN'S PAPERS

Ballot Law Board Takes Up Case Against Pelletier's Independent Opponent

Fifteen witnesses declared under oath today at a hearing before the Ballot Law Commission that they did not sign the nomination papers of Eugene I. Sullivan, independent candidate for district attorney running against Joseph C. Pelletier, and had no knowledge of the matter until it was called to their attention.

Among the witnesses called was John Carnes, eighty-two years old, of No. 15 Burnham street, Roxbury, and John F. Sullivan, a striking policeman, living at No. 1 Roxbury terrace.

Assistant District Attorney Daniel C. Melaasc conducted the prosecution. Moorefield Storey appeared for Sullivan.

Mr. Melaasc admitted that he had employed twenty-five striking policemen to investigate the authenticity of several names appearing on Sullivan's nomination papers.

Several more witnesses will be heard before the hearing is closed.

BURRELL SPENT $1,404 TO WIN CAMPAIGN

Swig and Monahan Paid Out Nothing in Primary Elections

Among the expenditures made by candidates seeking State offices in the last primaries, the largest sum paid out was $1,404, expended by Representative Frederick J. Burrell of Medford to secure the Republican nomination for State Treasurer.

Simon S. Swig, who won the nomination for the Senate in the Eighth Suffolk District, and former Senator George F. Monahan of Boston, one of the defeated candidates for the Democratic nomination of Governor, report in their returns filed with the Secretary of State, that they paid nothing out in their campaigns.

The sum of $45 was expended by Lieutenant-Colonel Frank S. Parkins of Salem, one of the defeated candidates for State Treasurer.

Frederick S. Deitrick of Cambridge, another of the defeated gubernatorial candidates, said his expenses were $746, most of the money being expended for advertising in Boston papers.

Henry G. Wells, who was defeated for renomination by the Republicans of Essex County for District Attorney, said he expended $1,360, nearly all of it for advertising.

It cost Representative Frederick J. Burrell of Medford just $1,404 to secure the Republican nomination for State treasurer, which surprised most of the Republicans of the State.

Others who have reported their expenditures are as follows:

William H. Hitchcock of Dedham, candidate for Attorney-General, makes return of $467 spent, of which $424 was for advertising. Fred P. Greenwood of Everett, candidate for State treasurer, spent $1,305, of which $544 was for a garage service and $900 was one item of printing; John W. Churchill of Boston, candidate for the Republican nomination to the Senate in the Suffolk district, spent $210; Howard K. Knight of Boston, for the House, spent $113; William G. Huey of Everett, same, $162; Frank G. Allen of Norwood, for the Senate, $477; Christian Nelson of Worcester, Senate, $400; Walter R. Parker, Reading, House, $198; Benjamin D. Lane, Boston, House, $218; James H. Brennan, Boston, Council, $162; Josiah Babcock, Jr., Senate, $497; Coleman Hilbert, Boston, House, $108; John H. Ellis, Winthrop district attorney, $203; Peter A. Donovan, Boston, Senate, $130.

The return of Clarence W. Rowley for nomination for attorney-general shows money spent all over the State for newspaper advertising reaching a total of $1,442. J. Weston Allen reports an expenditure of $1,382, mostly for publicity. Robert J. Buttomly returns $1,824, nearly all for publicity.

Joseph J. Larkin, Everett, House, spent $172; Allen R. Mcdonald, Boston, House, $195; Joseph H. Lundy, Boston, district attorney, $411; Ralph B. Stratton, Cambridge, House, $181; Charles W. Gould of Milford, for Representative, $168; Henry Achin, Jr., of Lowell, Representative, $126; George W. Brazier, Chicopee, county commissioner, $134; Walter S. Cowee, Danvers, Representative, gave his committee $190 and the committee reports total receipts of $293, all of which was spent. Jeremiah P. Keating of Westboro, Representative, $126; Earle P. Blake, Plymouth, sheriff, $608; Maurice N. Abrahamson of Boston, Representative, $99; Archer R. Simpson of Springfield, district attorney, $767; Isaac R. Trow of Greenfield, Representative, $99; William G. Andrew, Somerville, executive council, $266; George K. Pond, Greenfield, Representative, $100.

ENGLISH TAUGHT TO ALIENS BY STUDENTS

Teaching English to foreigners with actual practice teaching, is the newest special course at Boston University. It is given Tuesday and Thursday evenings in the department of religious education of Boston University, No. 607 Boylston street, and like other evening courses just begun, will extend twelve weeks.

This department has been established to meet the demands for a central training school for the church and social service workers in Greater Boston churches. The evening courses lead to the International Community Training School certificate and to the layworkers' certificate. Degree credit is allowed for certain of these evening courses also.

CAN PAY CLAIMS WITH SEIZED PROPERTY

Confiscated Goods May Be Used to Settle Debts Owed by Germany, Says Palmer

By International News Service.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 3.—The United States government has the power to pay various American claims against Germany out of the German property seized during the war by the Alien Property Custodian, now in possession of this government, Attorney-General Palmer said this afternoon in an address before the Missouri Bar Association here.

The treaty of peace carries Germanys acquiescence in any such action that Congress may decide to take with the enemy's property, according to Mr. Palmer.

"The United States has the right to use such property to pay the claims of Americans on account of any of their property in Germany that may not be returned to their ownership," he declared, "or on account of claims for damages to their property there, or in payment of debts which American citizens may have against German subjects.

"The United States may also use the funds in payment of losses incurred on account of the illegal acts of Germany during the World War, but before the United States entered the war. These claims arise principally out of loss of life and property, due to submarine attacks.

"Finally, the United States can, if it choose, turn over all or any portion of the fund to the Reparation Commission, thus making up a portion of the obligations which Germany must pay under the treaty."

THE SHEPARD STORES

CLERK ROUNDS UP 2 ALLEGED SUIT THIEVES

One Tried to Engage His Attention While Other Started Off with Garments

James Goorskeer and Lawrence Untheckle appeared in the City Police Court today as a result of plans which miscarried according to the story revealed there. They entered the store of the Arms Supply Company, No. 803 Washington street, and Untheckle called for the best suit in the house. The clerk produced one and Untheckle asked that it be taken to the rear of the store, where he could have a better light upon it. Meantime, Goorskeer, who had remained in the front of the store, announced an intention of going out for a moment to buy a package of cigarettes.

A certain eagerness on the part of Untheckle to engage the clerk well in the rear aroused the latter's suspicions, so he followed when Goorskeer sallied forth.

The latter's raincoat displayed a bulge and the clerk pulled the coat open, revealing a modish suit wrapped about Goorskeer's waist, it is alleged.

James and Lawrence were forthwith introduced to the majesty of the law. Their cases were continued to October 7.

Flourishes Revolver in Hotel and Is Sent to Jail for Thirty Days

Dan Driscoll hates to have anyone give him an argument, especially when he has been partaking of strong waters. So when he entered a popular local hostelry in a state of considerable stimulation, and an employe debated his right to saunter around there in the condition he was in, it seemed to Dan that something ought to be done about it.

He drew a revolver and proclaimed an intention of vindicating his outraged honor.

But the law, represented by a husky guardsman, appeared on the scene, and Dan was hustled to the pen, the law having little understanding of the requirements of chivalry.

In the police court today it was announced that Dan's address for the next thirty days would be the city jail.

Resists Arrest by State Guard and Sailor's Jail Sentence Is Suspended

When a guardsman decided that Dennis Ryan ought to take a trip to the police station and some of Dennis failed to agree with him. So strong, in fact, were the latter's objections that the assistance of a passing sailor was required before Dennis could be induced to visit the headquarters of the law. While being escorted there Dennis so strenuously attempted to enforce his view that he should not be arrested, that a raincoat belonging to the sailor was torn in several places.

In the City Police Court this morning Dennis was awarded one month for his persistent opposition to the wishes of his custodians. The sentence was suspended, however, when he promised to pay for the damage he had done the raincoat of the sailor.

Now, Here's a Camel With the Neck of a Real Drinker

By the three-toed horse Merrychippus!

As if it wasn't dry enough since the first of July, Amherst College has to go and add to the woe of recollections by announcing the finding of a Miocene camel with a giraffe's neck.

"How would you like to be a camel?" was a barroom word in the old days. A camel with a giraffe's neck makes one's mouth a small Niagara, imagining the taste the old fossil must have got out of a good drink.

And then to be able to hold the drink for seven days and nights!

Anyway, Fred Loomis, who professors up in Amherst, discovered the fossil of this old mammal and the three-toed horse out in western Nebraska, where they had been buried for only about a million and a half years.

Dorchester Shooting Mystery Solved in Two Arrests by State Guards

The mystery of shots fired during the night in the Dorchester district, which were thought by alarmed citizens to be running fights between state guardsmen and police strike sympathizers, was solved today in the Dorchester Police Court, when Joseph Botti, forty-six, of Livermore street, was fined $50 for having a shotgun in his possession, he being an unnaturalized alien, and not possessing $500 worth of real estate.

Joseph Benioni of Messenger street, was also arraigned for the same offence. He proved, however, that he owned real estate of sufficient value to exempt him from the law which prohibits foreign born residents who are not citizens and who have not $500 in real estate from having firearms.

Both arrests were made by members of the State Guard, and followed numerous complaints that guardsmen were firing recklessly in the district. People, terrorized by the shots which frequently were heard, feared to leave their homes.

BOSTON TO VOTE ON 2 PLATOON FIRE FORCE

Referendum Petition Already Has 13,425 Names; Papers Ready for Filing

At the state elections next month the ballots in the city of Boston will carry a referendum as to whether the two platoon system will be established in the Boston Fire Department.

The law requires that 11,154 names should be signed to petitions requiring that questions of referendum be placed on ballots. The election department today stated that 13,425 names have been signed already. These have been filed and, certified by persons, principally firemen. Several hundred other names have not yet been examined.

The department has returned the petitions to Daniel J. Looney of the Firemen's Organization, and he will file them with the State Secretary.

The referendum was made possible by last year's Legislature, and the question to be voted on will read on the ballots as follows:

"Shall an act passed in the year 1919 to provide for division into day and night forces of permanent members of the fire department, known as the two platoon system, be accepted?"

If this question receives a majority yes vote, it will go into effect soon after election.

LETTER SHOWS VAIN LOVE OF DEAD MAN

Unrequited Affection for Maine Woman Led to Suicide of Suspected Murder Victim

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 2.—Unrequited love for Mrs. Eva Clark, an Augusta, Me., woman, led Harry B. Holly, forty-three, to end his life by shooting himself with a pistol, it was learned here, when the Baltimore police recalled from Chief of Police James M. McKenney of the Maine city a letter written by Holly, it is alleged, to Mrs. Clark.

When Holly's body, with a bullet hole in his head, was found on the Trappe road near this city, it was believed that he had been murdered. The pistol with which he had been shot was not found and a coroner's jury returned the finding "that he came to his death from a pistol wound at the hands of a person unknown to the jury."

The letter received from the Augusta police, and which clears up the mystery, follows:

"Dear—I will call you that for the last time, for when you get this I will be past calling you any more Eva, you said in your last letter that you knew that I was only faking when I told you that I loved you. Well, you are wrong, for I do love you. I cannot live without you, and there is only one thing for me to do and that is to die. So by the time you get this I will be no more.

"Wishing you the best of luck, for a long and happy life, forgive me and forget me. Your unhappy H."

NOTES.

Ocean Forecast: Steamships leaving Boston and New York today for Europe will have fresh southwest and west winds and overcast weather to the Grand Banks.

The ocean tug International, which arrived here from Philadelphia with three barges, left port immediately with a string of light barges. Her engineers refused to go on strike in Boston, preferring to return to Philadelphia, where their families are located. This is the first ocean tug to leave Boston since the strike was called October 1.

The Enoil, another tug arriving today, is owned by the Atlantic Coast Transportation Company, which yesterday settled with the union on the engineers' terms. She will go out tonight, probably.

The steamships Howick Hall and Matoppo, wrested in a long ocean race from Calcutta by the City of Birmingham, which arrived yesterday, came into port today. They report encountering fierce gales in the Atlantic, which delayed their progress. They both bring valuable cargoes of East India products.

Lieutenant Feury objected to his wife's alleged intimacy with a Portland travelling salesman, who is a married man, but she claimed that he merely had a brotherly interest in her, and denied that he had ever stayed over night at the Morse apartments unless her mother or sister's husband were present.

ACCUSES WIFE OF IMBIBING 'WARD 8'S'

Drank Too Many, Says Portland Man, Who Asks Custody of Child

Portland, Me., Oct. 2.—Accusing his wife of drinking too many "Ward Eights" while living with her sister, Mrs. Clarence E. Morse, in Boston, during his absence overseas with the 56th Pioneer Infantry, First Lieutenant Cornelius A. Feury of this city, in his petition before the Probate Court here, asks for the custody of his six-year-old daughter, Katherine, who has been in her mother's charge.

The Feurys have not been living together since the lieutenant returned from service with his regiment from France. During his absence Mrs. Feury assisted her sister in conducting a manicuring and hair-dressing establishment in Allston and Boston.

JITNEYS MAY REPLACE TROLLEYS AT WHITMAN

Whitman, Oct. 2.—The Brockton-Whitman branch of the former Bay State system may discontinue. Division Manager F. F. Sheehan has agreed to allow the matter of a choice between the trolley and the jitney bus to stand until after the Brockton fair, when, he declares, he will post the seven-day discontinuation notice.

The town is powerless to prevent this. Twice have the townspeople refused to accept the act empowering towns and cities to govern jitney traffic, and it is stated that the issue will, for the third time, be placed before the town for referendum vote. The bus owners have tried in vain to secure some definite statement from the Whitman town officials, who prefer to remain quiet, stating that a special town meeting will soon be called.

WINTER OUTLOOK HARD, ITALIANS RETURN TO U. S.

New York, Oct. 2.—Profiteering in Italy, national unrest and the prospects of a bitter Winter in the northern part of that country are given as the reasons for the return to America of more than 800 Italians, all traveling steerage, who are today in New York after landing from the Dante Alighieri. They are the vanguard of the mosts of Italians who sailed from America with their families and their savings as soon as possible after the armistice was signed.

There was informal dancing and refreshments, which have been absent from Radcliffe affairs for two years, as a war-time conservation measure

DENIES HER LOVE WAS STOLEN BY RICH SUITOR

Divorced Husband of Mrs. Elsa Portner Humes Sues for Alienation

Washington, Oct 3 "It is true, and unjust for anyone to say that Mr Humes had anything in the world to do with my divorce from Mr Graham."

This was the comment of Mrs Elsa Portner Humes when asked about the suit of her former husband Lorimer C Graham, against her present husband, Augustus Lothrop Humes in which Graham seeks to recover $50,000 from Humes on the ground that he alienated the affections of Mrs Graham

Mrs. Humes was a chum of Miss Helen Taft in her debutante days in Washington and one of the four beautiful daughters of Mrs. Robert Portner, widow of a rich Virginia brewer.

"JILTED MILLIONAIRE."

Eight years ago she eloped with Lorimer C Graham, a wealthy New Yorker. The elopement caused a sensation in society circles, and disappointment was expressed at that time by friends who had expected her to marry a New York millionaire who has been a persistent suitor for her hand."

Graham swears that he and his wife lived happily, with their two children until June 5, 1917, when he enlisted in the navy and was assigned to duty in the Brooklyn Navy Yard. While he was absent in the service of his country, Graham alleges, Humes paid devoted court to Mrs Humes showering her with costly presents. Specifically mentioned are a gold cigarette case set with diamonds and a diamond bracelet.

Finally Graham charges, Humes persuaded Mrs Graham to go to Reno and obtain a divorce. The divorce was obtained without his knowledge, he declares. Humes and Mrs Graham's marriage on April 2 last followed. Their home is in The Hotel Plaza, New York

FAMILY APPROVES COURSE.

Mrs. Graham, in discussing the suit today, declared that Graham had been served personally with notice of the suit and that he had been represented in court by an attorney.

"I would have divorced Mr Graham if I had never seen Mr Humes" she said, "because I had been subject to Mr Graham's bad treatment of various kinds for years and as long as I could endure it. My family were thoroughly familiar with the neglect and cruel treatment, Fifty approved my course."

A Wide Diversity of Shapes
Each Is in Accord with Parisian Designing.

So different and yet so becoming that every woman will find just the hat she has pictured in her mind's eye as best befitting her type and tastes.

There are smart off-the-face models.

Equally charming are the large and medium mushrooms, the tricorns, crushed brims and chin-chin sailors, each with its distinctive trimming.

The hats are the newest fall creations and embrace every late innovation in style of trimming.

Shining Filene examples of fashion in lower-price clothes

Five separate Filene shops now specialize on lower prices.

Filene's

Buy in haste: repent at leisure!

Not a little of Filene value giving is due to thinking things out ahead. Long before they are ready to do actual purchasing, Filene buyers submit in writing, plans of what they propose to buy.

The next step is a leisurely survey of all the possible wordings of purchases. Then a comparison of values—including the value deep down beneath the surface so often missed in the hazard, hasty purchase.

And then when the time comes and the fashions are definitely settled, the actual buying is only a matter of completing what has long ago started!

The result is better planned stocks, fewer mistakes in buying and what interests you most: FILENE BETTER VALUES!

The new silhouette via modest serge frocks, $22.50 and less

Sketched is a good value in blue serge from the women's ever precise dress shop. The clever jacket effect ends in silk braided cuffs, which might easily be used for pockets. The lines of this frock are as straight as can be. $22.50

Women's serge dresses with straight-line overblouse, girdled with silk cords, have silk embroidery at round neck line and on tunic bottom. $18.75

Women's beaded Georgette dresses, satina, wool jerseys, tricotines, silk poplins and taffetas, in this shop, and never a one over $22.50.

(Filene's—mail orders filled—sixth floor)

Women's ripple cloth suits, $22.50

Sketched—Good-looking, straight-line coats, patch pockets and a fashionable string belt; skirts have set-in pockets.

One of a host of $7.50 dress blouses

Sketched, a dark blue Georgette blouse, always ready to slip on. Silk embroidery, the "shoe-peg" with centers of black shiny beads. The cuffs and collar have an extra turk for good-luck.

Filene's—mail orders filled—fifth floor

A $3.50 ostrich band

quickly transforms a large black velvet hat at $5 in the Street Floor Hat Shop into a dress hat. It has the very becoming slightly scooped brim. This shop not only furnishes the idea but puts the trimming on without charge.

(Filene's—mail orders filled—street floor)

Women's big warm mixture coats, $27.50

Sketched Heavy, soft mixtures in warm browns, with huge draped collars that button up as snugly as a muffler. Good looking, two-part belts.

Further SPECIALIZATION is the Filene remedy for high prices

Conclusive evidence of how good a remedy it is may be found in the new fifth floor shop which specializes in women's inexpensive coats and suits—none over $35. Procuring dependable wool garments at the less expensive prices these days is difficult enough to take all the time one person has, and he spends all his time on the problem. Two garments from this shop are sketched

NEMO CORSETS enjoy the distinction of having no substitutes

The curved Nemo bridge, the wonderful Wonderlift bandlet, the Self-Reducing devices are all patented, and can never be found in any but Nemo corsets. The durability of Nemo corsets is not patented, but it may be added to the Nemo features, for, as a matter of fact, it would be hard to name a moderately priced corset that will stand the hard, constant wear a Nemo corset will.

Even Nemo-corset devotees do not all know there are PINK as well as white Nemo corsets

No. 995 is a beautiful Nemo Wonderlift corset of pink brocade for medium to heavy figures, $12

No. 559 is a pretty pink batiste Wonderlift Nemo corset for small to medium figures, $7.

Nemo Wonderlift corsets, $7 to $12 | Nemo Self-Reducing corsets, $3.50 | Nemo white and pink corsets, $6.50 | Nemo corsets with elastic inserts, $4.50

NOTE: There is a federal tax on corsets of 10c on every dollar over $5.

LAWRENCE WAR VETERAN TAKES FRENCH BRIDE

Lawrence, Oct. 3. A romance which began on the battlefields of France, and which, after many months, resulted in the marriage of Joseph A. Beaulieu, native of France, to Miss Marguerite Beaumont, a nurse, who crossed the seas to wed. Mr. Beaulieu is now employed at the Arlington mills here. Mr. Beaulieu enlisted in Co. A, 26th Infantry, and was wounded in action. He was awarded the Croix de Guerre for bravery. Mr. Beaulieu is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Beaulieu of No. 45 Smith street. Miss Beaumont is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Beaumont of No. 12 Smith street, Lawrence.

METHUEN AUTOIST HELD FOR DEATH OF CHILD

Lawrence, Oct. 3. Warren Hutton, 19, of No. 15 Broadway, Methuen, was arraigned in the Lawrence district court this morning charged with manslaughter. Hutton pleaded not guilty and was held in $1000 bail for the grand jury. The hearing was held in the absence of Judge Harry Dalton, who is ill at his home in Methuen. Hutton is charged with having driven an automobile which struck and killed Walton Jones, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Walton of No. 49 Benning street, Methuen, while the boy was riding his bicycle on Broadway, Methuen, Sunday afternoon, Sept. 21. The youngster died at the Lawrence General hospital a short time after the accident.

CLOTHES FOR BUDDIES

Father and Son or just for Pals— They are here at Morse's

The Morse store has a diversified following. Young men, middle-aged men, elderly men, college men and youths early in the dignity of long trousers.

So Morse has designed the REFINEMENT* model for men of quieter taste, the ALCOCK with its smart belt for the younger set who want something new each season and the LOUNGE which is betwixt and between. There are many other models.

That is why selection is easy in the Morse Store. We are quick to sense the popular trend and our manufacturing department quickly provides us with the garment.

An excellent showing to select from, made with the usual Morse care at

$35.00 and $40.00

Have You Pictured to Yourself Just How Your New Fall Suit Should Look? You'll Find the Right Suit at White's among the

MISSES' Fall Suits

The Misses' Shop knew what you would look for first. Soft-finished fabric velour or a kindred material, a big fur collar to snuggle into on a frosty morning, well-fitting sleeves, carefully tailored shoulders, distinction in the cut and the lines—these are the things you'll find in the misses' suits at White's.

Velour and Sealine, $45

Pictured
Misses' Velour Suit, With Sealine Collar

The coat is fairly short, so as to be youthful and dashing, with a narrow string belt and little self-covered buttons. The skirt has a trim little belt and side pockets. The fancy figured lining makes you quite proud to remove the jacket at matinee or restaurant. Brown, navy, Pekin blue and burgundy..... $45

Eases Colds

At once! Relief with "Pape's Cold Compound"

The first dose eases the cold! Don't stay stuffed up! Quit blowing and snuffling! A dose of "Pape's Cold Compound" taken every two or three hours after that, will end dreadful colds and grippe misery.

It relieves almost at once! Opens your clogged-up nostrils and the air passages of your head clear, stopping nasty discharge or nose running, relieves the pain, dullness, feverishness, sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

"Pape's Cold Compound" is the quickest, surest relief known and costs only a few cents at druggists. It acts without assistance. Tastes nice. Contains no quinine. Don't accept substitute! Insist on Pape's. Advertisement.

FEAR GIRL IS FOUL PLAY VICTIM

14-Year-Old Virgia Nakash Disappears on Way to School

The police and private detectives are searching for fourteen-year-old Virgia Maude Nakash of Chestnut, who has been missing from her home No. 46 Hosmer street, that city since last Monday.

At that time she started for high school, less than a quarter of a mile away, but never reached there and has not been seen or heard from since.

Her mother fears that she is the victim of foul play.

Lived Over Year

She is being forcibly detained somewhere if she is still alive, said Mrs. Nakash. She has no reason to leave home, there was no quarrel with anyone, but on the contrary when I last saw her she was in the best of spirits. She attended school with me on Monday last and it was one of the pleasantest days at school we had ever spent.

The missing girl is decidedly attractive in appearance and intelligent. She is a pronounced type of blond, extremely well developed and tall for her age. She has large blue eyes, olive tone of skin and rosy cheeks.

She is about five feet seven and one-half inches tall, weighs 120 pounds and when she left home was dressed in blue. She wore a blue silk tam blue serge with white lining, blue serge dress with silver buttons on the waist, a blue jersey blouse, silk stockings and tan shoes.

Cupid Has Captured Half Wellesley's Junior Class

Half the junior class and a number of seniors at Wellesley College are reported as engaged to be married.

The list was already very long and now another one is added for at a dinner party Miss Jeanette L. Beall of New York, a senior at the college, announced her engagement to Lt. H. von Wedel of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., a former lieutenant in the army. Word has also been received by classmates of Miss Alice Shumway of Newton that her marriage to Theodore Walker recently took place. She is a member of the class of 1918.

Higgins Estate Inventoried

An inventory of the estate of Arthur R. Higgins of Hopkinton who died March 25, 1919, has been filed. The estate is valued at $14,150.30, $4,000.80 in personal property and $9,250 in real estate.

Greater Clothing Values

We had to do something more than buy our merchandise to good advantage

Let's Go! American Legion Military Carnival, Braves Field, Oct. 9, 10, 11.

We had to have a selling policy as economical as our buying methods. Fortunately such a policy has always been in force in every Kennedy store, and the most conspicuous feature of it is that we do business on a cash basis. And we might mention in passing that the Kennedy Stores were the first, and so far as we know are still the only retailers of strictly high-grade Men's and Boys' wear in America to operate to a strictly cash basis.

No matter how earnestly we might have desired to keep our prices down, we never could have made them as low as they are if we had had the heavy expenses and unavoidable losses of a charge account business to add to the cost of every garment.

Our business policy and merchandising methods make greater value-giving possible, and our desire to see how much business we can do instead of how much money we can accumulate make such value-giving an accomplished fact as comparison proves beyond question or doubt.

So if you want top-notch quality at rock-bottom prices, this is the store for you. Here are the best fabrics, the finest tailoring and the most attractive styles obtainable anywhere. And here are the famous

BIG OIL COMBINE HAS ISSUES OF $80,000,000

Independent oil companies which have consolidated under the name of the Petroleum Corporation of America have authorized issues aggregating $80,000,000 and the combine has or will require oil lands in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Colorado, New Mexico and California. It is denied at its offices that European capital is behind the merger, it being asserted that management and directorate are strictly American.

Included in the list of directors are: Alwyn Ball, Jr., prominent in the realty world; Joseph C. Hill, Jr., formerly of the Standard Oil Company; Clarence D. Inman, Roland E. Blaisdell, Charles B. Flint, of Flint & Company; F. B. Cadwell, of F. B. Cadwell & Company; George H. Gudebrod, of Gudebrod Brothers; Edward A. Clark, banker, and F. G. Clapp, geologist.

Regarding the policy of the corporation, it is said: "Through control, by its subsidiary companies of production pipe lines, refineries and selling organizations, the term 'from producer to consumer' will apply, provided that facilities inaugurated by the Standard, Texas and other large oil companies have demonstrated their adaptability for similar combinations."

Gold Shipments

Latest gold coin engagements for export are $230,000 for Hong Kong, which will be shipped from San Francisco, and $32,500 for South America. Gold bars amounting to $600,000 for India were obtained from the New York assay office by the Bank of Montreal.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Oct. 3.—The cotton market opened barely steady at a decline of 12 to 20 points. Selling was influenced by weakness at Liverpool, unfavorable news regarding the strike on the English railways and reported sizable pressure from houses with Liverpool connections. The last later held about steady around initial levels with trade inclined to slacken. Opening prices were: October, 31.56, off 22; December, 31.95 to 31.80, off 18 to 37; January, 31.95, off 20; March, 33.10, off 20, May, 32.60, off 30.

WARREN CITIZENS TO HAVE NATIONAL BANK

Warren, Oct. 3.—A Warren national bank is now practically organized. It will have capital stock of $50,000 and is to be owned and controled by the townspeople.

Old Production and Demand

Although oil production in the United States was 361,000,000 barrels last year, it did not equal the country's demand. Imports from Mexico totalled 42,000,000 barrels. Consumption is increasing at a rate that will call for a doubling of refinery capacity within eight years.

PLACING STEEL ORDERS DURING THE STRIKE

Some consumers are placing orders for steel without regard to uncertainties engendered by the strike. The Iron Age says:

"Buying has been checked but not suspended. Bookings are chiefly with furnaces and mills not seriously affected. Producers remain firm in their determination to shut down mills if it is not safe to run them, and consumers are expressing an unqualified support. It remains that without relief in thirty days the automobile industry will begin to feel the pinch."

Teach Your Children the Value of Money

It is your duty as a parent to encourage the habit of thrift and establish in the minds of your children the value of money. Explain to them the necessity of saving in order to prepare for the future Through the habit of saving they will naturally form other good habits; they will keep busy, seek knowledge through education; they will be able to pay their own way while acquiring this education, which will be the foundation for their future success.

An early start along the road of thrift will in later years save you from spending your own savings for your children's education, thus depriving you of all that you will be justly entitled to and have earned through hard work—namely, old age comfort and independence. This many parents have had to sacrifice in order to give their children what they considered a suitable education. To become a dependent in old age through sacrifices made for the benefit of children is a sacrifice which can be avoided in many cases if the parents will start early to teach thrift and saving.

The best way to teach the lesson is to give children the actual experience. Open a saving account with your local national bank or trust company in the child's name; bring him along to the bank occasionally when making a deposit; these visits will prove interesting to the child and stimulate an active interest as he watches the bank account grow. The main idea is to instill into the growing child the strong habit of saving, which

RENT GOUGERS HIDE BEHIND 'DUMMIES'

Counsel for State Commission Begs Relief Against New Practice of Profiteers

"Straw men" who have not a dollar invested are holding titles to property worth hundreds of thousands of dollars in which exorbitant rent raises have been made recently, it is charged by Harry N. Guterman, counsel for the State Commission on the Necessaries of Life, in a letter to Wilfred Bolster, Chief Justice of the Municipal Court.

Pointing out that the profiteering landlords have discovered a safe way of raising rents by giving tenants notice to leave, thus driving them into flats vacated on account of the exorbitant rents, Mr. Guterman asks Chief Justice Bolster to bring about a definite policy in treating with such cases in the courts for the protection of the public.

SUGGESTS REMEDY.

The letter follows:

SKULK BEHIND "DUMMIES."

"The pernicious activity of some of these real estate men was recently exposed at a public hearing held by the Special Commission on the Necessaries of Life. You have doubtless read the published reports of this hearing, which showed rent increases within a few months of from 25 per cent to 100 per cent. This public exposure of their methods, and the fear of prosecution under the act passed by the last legislature, intended to prevent the unreasonable increase in the cost of the necessaries of life, caused the speculators to abandon the direct method of rent-raising in which they had previously indulged.

"They have now discovered a new and apparently safer way of accomplishing the same end. Instead of a direct increase they now plan and in some cases have already begun, to order their tenants to vacate. A tenant so ordered to vacate within thirty days can find no place to go. He must apply to another landlord of the same ilk who offers to rent him an apartment which he has ordered vacated at a large increase in the rental.

My Dear Judge Bolster:

"May I call your attention to the critical housing problem confronting the citizens of Boston which may cause great suffering and possibly give rise to grave civic disorder. As you doubtless know, the war embargoes, increased cost of material, the scarcity and increased cost of labor and the high interest rate charged for the use of money has caused a practical suspension of the building of apartments and dwelling house property in this city. At the same time population has increased gradually causing a shortage in houses and apartments and there are practically no vacant tenements or small houses which can be secured by people of small or moderate means.

"Unscrupulous speculators seeing in this condition an opportunity to profit and having secured a large number of properties of this class, have proceeded to raise rents without regard to the tenants' ability to pay, or the welfare of our city. Taking title, for the most part, in the names of "straw men" who are financially irresponsible, and who have not a dollar's worth of real interest in the hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property, the record ownership of which is in their names, these speculators have grown rich out of the necessities of the community and are concealing their identity by hiding behind their irresponsible agents.

"This method of exchanging tenants enables the landlord to increase his rents to an extent which he would not dare to attempt by direct means for fear of public scorn and possible prosecution.

ASKS COURT RELIEF.

"Tenants who cannot afford to pay a large increase in their rent are threatened with eviction, and I am informed that ejectment proceedings are about to be begun in your court against several such tenants for the purpose of testing the policy of the courts in this matter.

"The press reports state that in the city of New York, where the same conditions exist, the courts have ruled that a tenant who has conducted himself properly, paid his rent promptly, and was otherwise desirable, but who had been ordered to vacate because a greedy landlord desired to re-let at a higher rental cannot be evicted if he had made a reasonably diligent but unsuccessful search for another suitable place in which to live.

"I feel that the judges of our Municipal Courts should agree upon some definite policy in dealing with similar cases in order that the public and the bar may know what the policy of the courts will be. Only if the courts of this city adopt a similar policy to those reported to have been adopted by the courts of New York can we avoid in Boston hundreds of families being thrown into the streets because they are unable to make their earnings meet the demands of the greedy property owners.

FEARS REVOLUTION.

"The country is seething with revolution. Agitators are everywhere, spreading dissension among our people. Strikes, industrial and race riots are but the outward manifestations of the internal unrest brought about by the inability of the average citizen to make the shrinking dollar meet the constantly increasing cost of the necessaries of life.

"Only as, and if, the administrators and legislators of our government will lend their utmost efforts to reassure the people in the willingness and ability of the government to help them meet their present problems, can we hope to avoid the riots, industrial disorders and social revolution which otherwise must result.

"Respectfully yours,
"HENRY N. GUTERMAN."

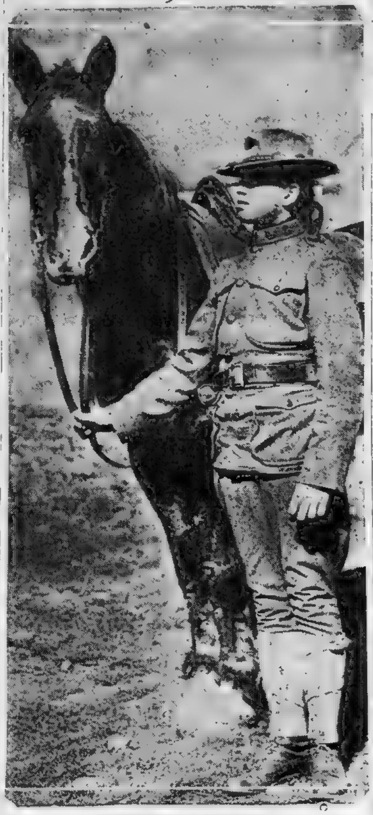
"OUT OF SIBERIA," CRY OVER FLOGGING OF SOLDIER



(Copyright: International Film Service.)

Corporal Benjamin Sperling of Brooklyn, N. Y., member of the 31st Infantry in Siberia. He was arrested at Iman and flogged at the order of General Rozanoff. International complications may result. The Kolchak government has been asked for an apology and an explanation.

New York, Oct. 3.—Indignation is being freely expressed by prominent persons over the flogging by Cossacks at Iman, Siberia, on September 5, of Corporal Benjamin Sperling, an American soldier. Sperling's home is at No. 420 Barbey street, Brooklyn.

American Legion posts probably will take up the matter and use it as a basis for requesting the withdrawal of United States troops in Siberia.

It was reported on good authority that a large contingent of the 27th U. S. Infantry, scheduled to arrive at San Francisco about October 20, may bring back with it Corporal Sperling and Captain L. P. Johns also seized by Cossacks, but who escaped.

Former Judge Leon Sanders, ex-president of the Immigrants' Aid Society, condemned the flogging as an outrage. He said:

"I think the American government should not permit the Russian government pro tem or the Japanese to get away with this outrage."

REDS SHOW CLASS BY WINNING

Four Runs on Four Hits Proof of Team's Ability, Says Pat Moran

By PAT MORAN.

Manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Well, I guess the boys demonstrated just a little bit more that they constitute one of the greatest ball clubs of them all.

To gather in four runs on four hits, and lead the opposition in the unearned runs, after said opposition connected for ten lusty hits in the game. And those Reds played one of the best all round games I've seen them stage in a long, long while.

They took advantage of every opportunity—they in need no real coaxing to push a run across when the chance presented itself, and the boys banged that ball when it meant runs, and on every occasion one they showed a fast work which is of Salee. The error that Neale made that let in two runs was an unfortunate one in a certain sense, but outside of robbing Rube out of a deserved shutout, did not affect the result. As it was it only netted circles the locals never made a move after the fourth inning the session of play that opportunity which was one for us.

THANKS TO WILLIAMS.

Claude Williams was a great help to us with those six hits on balls, and we all thank him, even if he was a bit sloppy at times. Williams pitched a great game in spots—and not so good at other times. But he was the big thing in our favor and you can bet on it that as soon as the boys learned his style and speed that he couldn't put them into the groove with any great degree of success, they began walking em out.

Sallee pitched one of the greatest games of his career despite the fact that the Sox touched him for ten safeties. The old fellow's averages of the Sox were helped but just as soon as he learned a few Reds left hander became most miserly. Let's see, the series now is now 3 to 0 in our favor, and only seven games to go that force the Sox to win five out of the next seven—quite a tough assignment for even so great a club that said Sleaze is slipping.

OUTLOOK ROSY.

We've already driven their pitching ace off the mound, battered two relief hurlers all over the ground and easily whipped their star left hander.

It looks quite rosy for us, and what makes it all the better is the fact that the two victories we have achieved has heightened our confidence. It must be remembered that my two pitching bets for the series—Reuther and Sallee have come through with flying colors, each deserving shutout victories.

Both ought to repeat and then I will have Ring, Eller, Fisher and Rogue to call on each and every one a great moundsman and capable of holding the meanace of the best ball clubs in the game.

REDS NOT OVERCONFIDENT.

It looks rather rosy for us, but don't get the impression that the "edge" we have on the Sox now has brought to the boys any feeling of overconfidence. They believe in themselves but they also believe they can be beaten if they don't play top baseball every minute. So you can depend upon it that they are going to play every game as if the outcome meant the championship itself. The spirit of my whole team is a wonderful spirit, but it's no different from what it was all season long. The boys play to win better than any ball club I've ever seen in action; and it's team work, gameness, plus ability, plus brains, that count. And those are the assets of the Reds.

TO USE HIGHLANDER.

I'm not certain who we will open with in Chicago, but he will be a

Jimmy Ring or Dave Bancroft Jimmy is our tough customer. It's just possible of the Reds' pitching staff can ever seen in the National League and he'd a capital chance a year or two ago. However, I'm not a prophet [illegible] Jimmy Ring or Dave Bancroft [illegible] possession of [illegible] that [illegible] top of the box [illegible] one of the [illegible] and lack of speed help from the home town folks will change them. But those who reason that way are grossly in error. The Reds played the greatest baseball on the road through 1919 and to consider the series [illegible] prove it [illegible] Chicago, even [illegible] Cubs [illegible] Cubs.

WHITE SOX AT WHITE HEAT, SAYS BOSS

By KID GLEASON.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Winning the first two games may have given the Reds an awful big advantage in the world's series, but it was quite evident one of [illegible] fighting mad and [illegible] the dark for one minute [illegible] a man in the bunch that [illegible] yet.

You know the old game was [illegible] I'd like to [illegible] was a break in the game [illegible] our favor outside of [illegible] from right field by Neale that got away and let us have two runs. That wasn't much of a break then, because the Reds had their four already. Things can't break against us all the time. Maybe things will, [illegible] for a couple of innings [illegible] then we would have it all [illegible]

FELL DOWN TWICE.

We fell down twice in succession I'm talking about the times Gandil went up to bat with the Reds' infield drawn in. You know there isn't a man on my ball club I'd rather see up there than Gandil up there to [illegible] a play like that I've seen him [illegible] up there games in pinches [illegible] and I fully expected him to do it again, but once he bounced a right straight to Kopf and the man on third didn't try to score, and [illegible] he hit down to Daubert and the man on third was thrown out at the plate. If either one of those blows had gone through the White Sox would have been off in front, and I think they would have won the game. I can't explain Williams' wildness except that he was pitching too good a game. He was trying to do something all the time. He wasn't handing up anything to be hit. He was putting a stiff curve and getting them high and low, but he didn't have quite good enough control to do those things, and I'm not in the ball game.

Williams will be there for another game, and if he has control of that stuff of his the locals will have a lot of trouble. I've got another left hander, Louis Kerr, and he'll bother them too. You know Eddie Cicotte was so mad he wanted to go in today. But I've got to have some more rest [illegible] Bill James too to spring on the Reds.

BLAMES THE BIG ARMS.

My pitching was all right, but we must get more than luck in the line of hitting. I never saw such [illegible] as we have got, and I don't think it can occur again. The boys were [illegible] They showed the [illegible] playing on one play by the fourth and Rough was on [illegible] started a double play. Felsch was caught [illegible] and made a bluff to take the throw and cut Groh off at the plate if he dared try to score. Well, Groh stuck to third didn't he and Eddie, seeing he had Groh bluffed, let the ball go to Risberg, and they had Rough out by six feet.

In my story of the first game, I mentioned the great defensive playing done by Rough and one must mention him again in this story because of the great catch he made off Felsch in the sixth. If he hadn't run back and got that ball it would have been a triple, sure, and there's no telling what might have happened. One man was on at the time, too.

SPARKLING CATCH.

That catch was about as sparkling a play as ever was made in a world's series, and Rough was back and got the ball with both hands, he looks like a great player to me. It was his hit that drove in the first run, too, and his base on balls was responsible for the next run in the sixth.

[illegible] both Williams and Schalk thought that fourth ball [illegible] that could have been called a strike Rough took it and got the decision.

Maybe it will be a tough battle to win five games before the Reds can win three but they haven't got those three, yet, and I am sure I have the kind of a ball club that can come from behind. My gang is just mad enough now to start.

YALE SQUAD IS GIVEN DRILL IN SIGNALS

New Haven, Oct. 3.—Dr. Al Sharpe, Yale's head coach, ordered only a signal rehearsal as final preparation for the opening game of the season tomorrow with Springfield Y. M. C. A. College. He feels that the squad has been driven vigorously, and since then a decided let-down in the [illegible] work has occurred.

The varsity coaching this week has centered around the defensive play of the team. No Yale eleven has ever before been drilled so extensively as early in the season on this point.

The scrubs out of forty forward passes were able to [illegible] complete and, although given an unlimited number of downs, they were unable to cross the varsity goal line

PENN COACH CALLS MEN FOR NOT KNOWING SIGNALS

Philadelphia, Oct. 3.—Penn, although not having a full week of scrimmaging, is in fairly good shape for the contest with Pennsylvania Military College tomorrow on Franklin Field. No more changes will be made in the system of attack. Folwell made it known that each man was to familiarize himself with these plays and to learn his duty in the operations.

SOX HAVE NOVEL ALIBI

Player Blames Fans—Not the Ball Fans—for Double Defeat

By NICK FLATLEY.

Chicago, Oct. 3 Kid Gleason and his White Sox are in the World Series making class. In other words, they have played a pair of love sets with the Cincinnati Reds and have been knocked for a goal on two separate and distinct occasions. Today their social standing in the World Series is the same as two months ago. On August 3, 1919, they hadn't won a single game from the Reds. Today, meaning October 2, 1919 yet to score a victory, they staggered into their home town lair with that impressive to say nothing of a ninth-inning average.

That's nothing, said Kid Gleason, and he said it with a broad grin on the first time he had been fighting since Tuesday night.

There always is a plot in high class scenarios and such is the case in this masterful production which has drawn $19,504 in two days. There are plots, reasons and everything and we now will give the true facts and inside stuff on the two defeats of the White Sox.

Now for the big question.

"Why did the Chicago White Sox lose two games to the Reds?"

Answer: "Because of the fans."

BLAME THE FANS.

The New York Giants objected to the fans in Cincinnati and said they were a rough lot. The Cincinnati Reds objected to the fans in New York and said they were bottle throwing roughnecks or words to that effect. Now the White Sox have stepped forward with a new howl about the fans, but they are not of the human, howling, rabid bottle throwing variety. The fans they object to are not interested in baseball. They never have seen a ball game and they never will. They are gentle and companionable never have urged a dirty trick, always are friendly and now are held in disrepute. They are the electric fans in the Sinton Hotel.

"I'll tell you how it is," said one of the players, hoarsely. "Now listen. It's awful hot in Cincinnati and we gotta turn on the electric fans in the room so we can sleep. What happens? The fans work while we sleep and we wake up all sore and stiff. Look at us here at Comiskey. John Collins has the grip; Eddie Collins ain't feeling well; Cicotte got his arm in the breeze and got a cramp and with all of that, how can we win a ball game under them conditions, I ask, how can we win? We can't. Just wait till we get home."

TURN ON THE STEAM.

All of which means the electric fans will be kicked out of the old homesteads and the steam pipes turned on. But regardless of what it means, isn't it a swell alibi? That's them all over again.

But forgetting all about alibis and things like that, the fact remains the Reds outclassed the White Sox in the opening conflicts. That's all there was to it—they were outclassed. Cicotte and Williams, the two best bets, have been eliminated and took more punishment than Grimm, Groh, Nelson now has here, Bill James, Red Faber and Erskine Mayer to depend upon which is like bolstering up the Brooklyn Bridge with a hairpin. Kerr was expected to start today.

The five straight games stuff is looking better every minute. In the lobby of our expensive hotel the White Sox rooters are emulating the denizens of Redland and coin of the realm used for wagering purposes is as numerous as hirsute adornment on a Newfoundland poodle. The only safe bet is on the Chicago team to place. "Oh, I don't know," said an American League manager this morning. "I wouldn't be at all surprised to see the Sox breeze through and cop the remaining games in a row. To my mind, the best thing that possibly could have happened was the elimination of Cicotte and Williams. Those birds have been touted as the best in the world, but to my mind, they are overworked, broken-down burners. They have gone through a tough season, virtually won the flag for Chicago and now have cracked. Let the other pitchers go in and show what they can do and there still is a good chance.

"Remember, the White Sox are a fighting bunch and they never are licked until the final whistle blows."

That may all be true, and the real test is here. The Reds are playing on an alien soil and a little thing like that should not annoy them. They are two games to the good a big advantage in a short series—and it will be a hard club to beat. The Sox, on the other hand, probably will try too hard and when a team gets in that condition, it's time to pack up the valise and beat it.

BEST BETS GONE WRONG.

A couple of Chicago's best bets have gone wrong. And that hasn't helped the Allnastre Hose any more than a muffle on nds a rock cop motorist. For example, Joe Jackson, in the second game came up in the ninth and was called out on strikes. When one of the best natural hitters in the game does a little stunt like that in the big series, there's something wrong.

Then again, take Happy Felsch. He's not happy at all. He's one great outfielder and a bird of a hitter, but he hasn't had any luck in this series at all. He hasn't made a hit yet though he has bunted a couple on the nose. He gave Eddie Roush a chance to make one of the most brilliant catches in World's Series history in that second game over in Redland.

ROUSH'S GREAT WORK.

Hap came up with Weaver on second and socked one right on the roof of the trade mark. The agate soared out for the fence and the Chicago crowd roared approval. Roush went back like a scared greyhound. He was equalling Arthur E. Duffey's best speed all the way. He got to a point almost agin the barrier, turned, jumped in the air and pulled down the ball. It was a marvellous capture, and robbed Felsch of a homer.

In both games the Red centre fielder has worked wonders. He has more range than Tris Speaker right now, and the same unerring judgment of balls hit back of him. He has been in position to catch every fly that has been knocked into the Red outfield in the two series games. He is feared more or less by the time any other Red, and as a result has been handed three passes so far. The Chicago pitchers refuse to give him a good one to hit at, and the blow he made that started the rally against Williams was off a ball deliberately chucked inside. That sounds almost too expert, but it's a fact none the less. Edward Roush has used this series to get the fame that he deserves, and before it's over the deans will all be comparing him with those mythical wonders of the dead and gone era. Mentioning Roush reminds us that we haven't concluded with Hap Felsch.

That youth introduced the break into the second game.

There always is a break in those games, as Hughey Fullerton says. Hap tossed it up to public view in the fourth, which is the big Red inning, anyway. Hain waved for a starter and Daubert subtitled. Then Groh was passed. Here Roush came through with a torrid one shot to centre that knocked in Rath.

Felsch stopped the ball and then buried it indiscriminately toward the dish. He hadn't a chance in the world of getting Rath, but he had Groh nailed trying for third. There wasn't a bit of doubt of that. But Felsch pulled a real boner. Had he played as he usually does, he would have picked off Heinie and halted the rally that meant three runs and victory for Cincinnati.

The game was a real triumph for Jim Sollie of the Reds. He went in there and pitched, and well, tell the world he tossed something up there. He was hit safely ten times, but that didn't make any difference to him. He was always present in the pinches and used his stuff and his brains just like a real champion should.

Claude Williams had a lot of stuff, but he was wild, as most birds are who have a lot of stuff. He gave more passes than the manager of a flivvering show, and the records show that every B'd score was the result of a Williams' walk. The four heroes who crossed the sauer in the thrilling drive of the Pat Moranes were put on the bases by the free transportation route.

The Cincis only made four hits off Claude, but they tucked them in around the passes and that's why the White Sox don't figure in the series now any more than Jess Willard did after that first round.

JACKSON GIVEN A BAG BY BASEBALL WRITERS

Cincinnati, Oct. 3.—At the meeting of the Baseball Writers, Joe Jackson one time president of the association was presented a handsome travelling bag by the members. The association passed resolutions favoring the announcement of the full batting order by either the umpire or the managers of the teams to the press preceding every major league game.

Thomas Beats Noyes

Waterville, Me., Oct. 3.—Battling Thomas of Chicago and Jack Noyes of Memphis fought a fast double six bout, Thomas having a shade on his opponent. Thomas won the newspaper decision by close work in the fourth and fifth rounds of the second bout. Noyes featured in a clever defence.

FANS CHEER RUNS MADE ON ELECTRIC SCORE BOARD

The baseball fans at Mechanics' Building got up on their feet and howled with delight when the figures representing Red [illegible] around the score board and "moved" for the [illegible] every move made in the big game at [illegible] diamond was recorded on the electric score board and it required very little imagination for the fellows to mentally picture the minute action [illegible] in Portland, [illegible] nearly [illegible] the plays [illegible] Building.

The [illegible] Mechanics' Building is one of [illegible] most simple appliances recording a baseball game. It shows every ball, strike, foul, base hit, run, error and all the movements of the players around the board and batters.

Except for the more complicated plays all of the action was recorded on the board. In the case of a fumble or wild throw on a ground ball an operator [illegible] It also shows the exact spot to which a ball is batted.

PRESS CLUB GOLFERS PLAYING FINAL ROUNDS

The final rounds in the open amateur tournament of the Boston Press Club tournament were to be played today in both divisions. In the first flight, or championship division for the Hanover Trust Co. trophy, Fred J. Wright, Jr. of the Abenakis Club was to play George Aulbach of Scarboro while in the second division F. W. Small, Jr., of Bear Hill was to meet W. W. Hurley of Wollaston.

White Sox Show Little Fighting Spirit

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Williams wabbled wearily, issued six passes, four of which were transformed into runs, and today the rampant Reds have the White Sox driven back, the Hindenburg line of the American League broken and Chicago in desperate straits.

The fact that the White Sox outhit the Reds two to one [illegible] they outplayed them in [illegible] works, that the Reds erred more and in worse fashion counting for nothing against the fact that two of the Reds' solid hits came during the final passes. The opportunists of the Reds and the [illegible] impotence of the White Sox [illegible] but beyond the fact that the breaks favored the Reds, that the White Sox hardest drives were [illegible] and displayed, beyond the fact that Rush made one of the most [illegible] in a world series there is no fact that the Reds showed more fight, more punch and more spirit than the White Sox.

It seemed to be spirit, enthusiasm and confidence and not mechanical perfection and it was the dash and morale of the Reds that made their victory over Williams possible.

LITTLE FIGHT IN SOX.

The White Sox showed but little of the fighting spirit that made them champions in their own circuit. It seemed as if they had the Reds rather cheap and disdained to get excited over so small an affair as a two game series and they were beaten. The Reds' defense broke once and almost permitted the victory to escape, but when it was necessary their defense arose to the occasion and stopped the Sox.

It is a maxim in baseball that it is not hard to hit Ruether until his mean runs. In the second game he showed that the saying was true. He pitched when he was in danger and the remainder of the time he spent in saving up all the stuff he possessed to use in later pinches. The Sox hit him hard enough to win two games, but their drives were made at the wrong times and most of their hardest hits went astray. Ten of their smashes went safe, ten other hard hit balls went to fielders. They were smashing Sallee all the time, and failing in the pinches.

SOX KNOW THEY MUST FIGHT.

The defeat seems to have awakened the White Sox to the realization that they are forced to fight to beat the Reds. The realization of this fact seems to have come about the eighth inning. Up to that time the White Sox seemed dead or else confident that they could come through whenever they got ready. Now they are in rather desperate straits. Gleason hardly will dare try Cicotte again before the Saturday game and it looks as if he will be compelled to work Dick Kerr in the opening game in Chicago, the pitching superiority which Cincinnati claimed and which the dope showed they possessed, now is much greater. Moran has all the tactical advantage. The Sox have showed that they have the better team and that they play the inside game better.

There were two spots in which the Reds looked quite amateurish. One was when they fell down without an effort to play the double steal, and the other time when the Reds attempted the same steal and the White Sox gave them a lesson in how to stop it. Schalk held the runner dead at third, Risberg came in as if to take the throw permitted the ball to go over to Collins, who tagged out the runner standing up. Twice the Reds were way out of position, leaving spaces in the field and once they permitted a throw from right field to go clear through the infield and out to left, giving the White Sox their two runs.

GENERALSHIP OR LUCK.

The second guessers, of course, will declare that Gleason was outgeneraled by Moran. Whether it was a matter of generalship or of luck never will be settled. Gleason played the straight game, sacrificing his batters along during the early part of the game. It was evident that he believed all the Sox needed was a run or two to win. His sacrificing game failed to yield results. Later he switched and played hit and run with no better result, and once with a disastrous termination.

The supreme problem of the game was the one that was put up to Gleason in the fourth inning, the inning which seems to be the break inning of the series. His strongest shock forces were up and Weaver and Jackson ripped off hard hits. The problem was as to whether order Felsch to hit or to sacrifice. Felsch is one of the best right handed hitters in the country and the pitching of Sallee seemed to be just the kind made to order for him. Had he been ordered to hit then the story probably would have been different.

Now they must fight to regain their lost ground, and meantime the confidence of the Reds is growing. The change of scene to the Chicago grounds may help restore the ragged morale of the American Leaguers, but that is doubtful. They have always fought hardest when they were behind and they have the chance to demonstrate their claims to gameness.

DOYLE BEATS BUTLER IN 12-ROUND BATTLE

Paul Doyle won a decision over Walter Butler in twelve fast rounds in the feature bout at the Casino A. C., Lynn, before the largest crowd that ever packed the hall.

In the semi-final, Harry Loring of Boston won on a foul in the first round over Phil Maron of Salem. Harry Nelson of Boston was given the decision over Freddy Bryson of Malden in their six-round go. Young Leonard of Chelsea packed a punch into dreamland in the second round which put George Robins of Roxbury in their scheduled six-round bout.

Harvard Finishes Up for Boston College Game

Harvard finished its football work today in preparation for the Boston College game. Coach Fisher insisted that the men take things easy, for tomorrow's contest with the Maroon and Old Gold is bound to be hard.

Three Harvard regulars are out of the Boston game through injury. Keith Kane and Ned Weatherhead, who showed their power in the Hates game, being responsible for touchdowns, are both injured and will be out of commission until next week. Kane's substitute will be McCabe, a giant crew man who will play right tackle, and Jack Desmond will play right end in place of Weatherhead.

Both understudies are not far behind the regulars as players, and Boston College can find no consolation in the absence of the two varsity performers. Stan Burnham will be replaced at right halfback by Swede Nelson, who is playing a bang-up game, and Mitchel Gratwick will play a quarterback position in place of Dick Humphrey.

The Harvard eleven is fit otherwise to give Boston College a stiff argument. Eddie Casey is in rare form, and Ralph Horween is kicking like a veteran. Billie Murray continues to pilot the eleven with old-time vigor, and Morris Phinney is playing a rare game at left end.

Crew Men Report

One hundred and thirty-five candidates have reported for the varsity crew at Harvard, Coach Haines, Captain Davis and Dr. Withington addressed the men. Three tentative eights were boated.

No lynching in Cinti.

KID GLEASON, heavily veiled, escaped from Cinci by the back entrance.

The Mayor of Cinti and suburbs came out of his hiding place in the swamps after Kopf bammed that triple. There was no lynching last night. Ever since Omaha started the fashion a Mayor's life ain't worth the chip of a nick beetle. When anything goes wrong in the Middle West they hang the Mayor. They used to beat their wives.

AFTER crawed passed away the rubber rope, the Mayor got quite brazen. He spoke at the Reds' banquet given by the Ohio Order of Pop Bottle Hurlers.

The Mayor wore a vest with lapels on it. He said:

"GENTLEMEN, there are decimal points in the enthusiasm with which I greet you. You have made Cincinnati a baseball town of the first water. A comparison which may offend our brewers, but it's better than the stuff our brewers are handing us.

"AS I look at box scores, I feel almost proud to live in Cincinnati. Being a Mayor, I do not approve of hanging Mayors. I trust that this will not offend you sportsmen, but I have a very tender neck that won't stretch more than two feet without injuring the fabric. And a two-foot neck is too much territory for one Adam's apple to cover.

"HOWEVER, so long as the muddy Ohio flows down to spoil the great and mighty ocean," went on the Mayor. "My admiration for the Reds will also flow on forever, like Tennyson's brook, a body of water, gentlemen, that is very much sung about but very little sought after.

"ON the eve of the team's departure for Chicago to beard the lion in his boudoir," the Mayor concluded, "I speed you onward, with the acclamation of a great city sizzling on your ear trumpets. Go forth, and maybe vulture of victory rest on your banners. This would be the first time the Red team has carried the banner. I give the farewell of that Spartan mother-in-law. Either return victorious or return on your Ford wind shields."

THE Mayor made a powerful speech that almost interrupted the eating. After the cheering had evaporated he sponged up his soup and left the banquet on his way to get a snap to eat in a one-armed lunch. The Mayor is a wise cracker. When it comes to rope lynchings he wants to pick out his own neckties.

HE returned home in his limousine, which he is thinking of having half sold and healed on account of the high cost of living. But whatever the cost of living is, the Mayor is willing to pay the price.

MEDFORD HIGH TO BATTLE ST. JOHN'S

GAMES TOMORROW.

St. John's at Medford.
Malden at Pittsburg.
Brookline at Lynn Classical.
Roxbury Latin at St. George.
Peabody at Revere.
Newton High 2d at Country Day School.
Methuen at Lawrence.
Providence Technical School at Waltham.
Cushing at Andover.
Portland at Exeter.
Noble & Greenough at Middlesex.
Huntington School at Allen School.
Bromo-Nichols at Milton Academy.
Woburn High at Winchester.

The annual game tomorrow between Medford High and St. John's Prep will be the one which will be watched with the most interest by the followers of the schoolboy games. Every year there is a large crowd of spectators at this game and a little thing like the World's Series will not be enough attract on to keep any of the fans away from this game.

St. John's in the past game had their hands full, winning from Cushing Latin but Quirk has made several shifts and the team that takes the field against Medford will be a stronger one, and we give Jim Mendell a suggestion—a hard battle. The game will be played at the Medford High athletic field, starting at 3 o'clock.

Most of the other games on the schedule will be played out of town save Moroy a Malden team which goes to Pittsburg, which just at present is as out as the home of Pat Moran. Revere High will play Hill Joyce team at 1:30.

This Day in Our History—October 3, 1919

THIS is the anniversary of the birth in 1800 of George Bancroft, the historian whose work on the history of the United States won him a prominent place among literary men. Bancroft, as Secretary of the Navy, under Polk, was responsible for the founding of Annapolis Naval Academy. He occupied prominent diplomatic positions.

The Greyhound's Origin

THE origin of the greyhound, according to some authors, is a mystery. In ancient times the greyhound was considered a valuable present, especially by ladies, with whom it appears to have been a particular favorite. In the reign of Henry VIII. the greyhound was distinguished as one of the king's beasts.

THE GRAY HAIR

A MYSTERY STORY OF NEW YORK LIFE

"Society for the Redistribution of Superfluous Wealth" Terrorizes Millionaires

By Arthur Somers Roche

(Whose novels have placed him in the front rank as a writer of detective stories)

The Action So Far

John Hastings, multi millionaire and captain of industry, has employed Robert Allaire, a young lawyer, to do some work for him. A criminal impersonates Allaire and reveals himself as a member of "The Society for the Redistribution of Superfluous Wealth." He threatens Hastings, who attempts to summon aid. The visitor shoots his dead and escapes. Arrested later, Allaire proves a perfect alibi. Police Commissioner Blake is puzzled. Meanwhile three other millionaires are slain. Allaire receives a note from the society and talks over his arrest and the letter with Allison Courtney, his fiancée. Blake is replaced by Heenan, a famous detective. Millionaire Tobey is kidnaped by the dread society. Heenan finds the package of supposed protection money to contain only waste paper. The master criminal had bound and gagged Wilkins' chauffeur and escaped with the real cash. Allaire thinks he recognizes Courtney driving a supposed taxi. Blake picks a gray hair from Allison's coat

"LOOK here, Blake; I don't believe that either Miss Courtney or myself cares for this sort of feeling. What's the idea?"

"I've told you that perhaps I'm crazy," said Blake. "Please don't ask me."

And Allaire suddenly understood. Blake had not yet been persuaded that Courtney was not the guilty man. Blake evidently made much of the fact that Allison had mistaken a gray-haired man for her uncle. But even so? Allaire could not understand.

Had Been Home

Courtney had been home when Allison reached there after her adventure with the gray-haired man. And he had not passed her on the way — the gray-haired man had not, or her uncle, either—so why this mysterious questioning with its unintelligible denouement?

The mystery was getting on Blake's mind—that was the answer. And yet, despite his inner ridicule of Blake, Allaire waited anxiously for his fiancée's reply. And it came, after a burst of laughter

"Oh, you mysterious man!" said Allison. "My tailor has gray hair. Does that satisfy you, Mr. Blake?"

"I guess it does," he answered. Then he rose. "Allaire, I can look after that Gat Side matter myself. I'll see you at your rooms at about 8"

Allaire was none too reluctant at being left with Allison

"All right," he answered. Blake bowed to the girl, nodded to Allaire, and left the room. Then Allison turned to her lover

"Look here, Bob; I'm not a silly little girl. I wouldn't ask you before Mr. Blake—it was a little too embarrassing. But — you didn't phone uncle out of anxiety for my safety—the story sounds thin. And all this about the hair, and—what does it all mean?"

"It means," he said bravely, "that Blake and I, being a couple of hysterical jackasses, were fools enough to think that your uncle was the society or its head I thought he knew the Wilkins car uptown, and Allison, forgive me, I was an idiot for"

Her banishment made him pause. Then she laughed

An Hour of Respite

"Of course I forgive you, silly," she replied "There's nothing to forgive, you have a right to your theories, Only—they are so absurd that they are laughable Uncle was at home all morning, oh, how could you be such a foolish boy?"

"Lord knows!" he said "I'm nervous, Allison But it's all gone now. Finding your uncle at home—it took a long time to bring him to the 'phone, didn't it?"

"He was asleep—had been sleeping, and was in his dressing gown about to come downstairs for a book," she replied, "or else it would have taken longer I called to him at first, but he didn't hear me; so I had to go up to his room He was terribly angry, though. If he'd really been asleep—Bob, tell me everything you've done! do you think I'd better get a doctor for uncle? Don't you think he'd better leave town? Won't this awful society be twice as wicked now that he's refused their demands?"

The questions tumbled one after the other.

"Look here, Allison," said Allaire decidedly: "For just one hour, we're not going to mention this wretched affair. Your nerves are all unstrung. You're going to forget all about it. And so am I. Understand that, young lady? Not one word about this mystery. We're going to talk about ourselves, how happy we're going to be in a little while, the color-scheme of our drawing-room in the apartment we're going to have, how much we'll pay the cook, and that sort of thing. I insist."

She tried to smile.

"Oh, Bob, but even now that society may be planning some incredibly awful thing—I'd like to talk that way, but uncle is in danger." She rallied with that superb courage which was the Courtney heritage. "Even so, Bob, a little cheerful conversation never did any harm, did it? How do you like my new ring? Not yours, silly! The ruby"

"When did you get it?" he asked, playing up to her light lead.

"Uncle bought it last week — Tuesday week, to be exact. He was down in Maiden Lane, having some old family jewelry reset, and this was one of them. They were delivered only this morning. Handsome, isn't it?"

"Not half as handsome as the finger it adorns, my dear"

And so their hour swiftly passed. Meanwhile, Blake was taxi-cabbing it to Jepner's, on Broadway, and thence, tense with excitement, to the "Bell street lodging house where Casey Red had met his death.

Jepner himself came bustling forward from the costuming room, whence he had seen Blake in colloquy with a clerk.

"I have more news," he announced in a voice whose effect was spoiled by his asthmatic wheeze.

Important News

"I was just asking for you," said Blake with a smile. "What is it?"

Jepner drew him aside with an air of mystery.

"One of my clerks who was off last night has given me valuable information this morning. I telephoned you at your house address, but was unable to get you. I then thought of communicating with the police, but you and Tom Brothers and my word of secrecy has been passed. Important though the news might be, it should go first to you, and to you only."

"What is it?" demanded Blake.

"The clerk remembered that he, about a month ago, sold the wig to a man who afterward bought the other wigs. There is no mistake, for the clerk saw the man make the later purchase. The wig he bought from this clerk was gray"

Blake's heart beat faster. He drew forth from his pocketbook, and had placed it after leaving the parlor of the Martinette the gray hair that had protruded from beneath the cool hat of Allison Courtney

"Jepner," he asked, "is that hair from a wig"

The purse lipped man took it from Blake's hand. He examined it. He looked up

"It is—most certainly," he declared. "It is the hair of a good, refined for use in a gray wig In deed, this hair might have come from the gray wig which was sold to the man who bought the others. Did it?"

"I believe it did," said Blake grimly. He stilled Jepner's excitement by gripping his shoulder

"Look here," he said to the little man: "I don't need to tell you how serious this matter is. I gave you a tip last night, and you've read the papers, too. Don't let a soul know about my coming to you to-day—anything about what we've said I didn't breathe a word about your coming last night, had the little wigmaker. "I won't talk now"

He thrust out his hand and gave Blake the grip of their order It was enough. Promising to let Jepner in on any developments if he possibly could—the wigmaker loved secrets; he heard so many of them from the babbling lips of the people of the stage who patronized him

Blake left the place and drove to the last address of Casey Red

The landlady of the place, plying a trade that was in imminent danger of clashing with the law—indeed, she paid fines for permitting people to smoke opium there—was averse to conversation about the departed Casey

But on Blake's assuring her that he had no connection with the police, but was interested in Casey Red for private reasons, and upon his adducing the stronger argument, which took the form of a $20 bill, the woman consented to give him what little information she knew about the habits of her late lodger

Armed with this knowledge, Blake made his way to a saloon on the Bowery. There money again loosened the lips of a bartender. Yes, Casey Red was pretty well known in the place. He belonged to a gang, but the gang had been broken up by the police a couple of months ago. Casey had remained out of trouble because he'd not taken part in any of the rough work of the gang

At least, Casey had always borne his part nobly when it came to fighting with other gangs, but Casey wasn't out for the rough stuff with strangers Casey was not a crook That is, as far as theft was concerned. As to his propensity to use firearms, the bartender cared not to talk

How Had He Lived

How had Casey lived? Well, Alderman Klitzky found use for him at election time, and the alderman never forgot a friend. Casey saved his neck from a gang of strong-arm people once, and the alderman was always "there" when Casey needed the price of a meal. But hadn't Casey spent rather more money recently than would be accounted for by the alderman's benefactions"

Yes, he had. There'd been a gray-haired old gent; looked like money, too, with Casey quite a bit recently Yes, Casey had been flush lately, comes to think about it. But the bartender had given the matter no attention. Minding his own business kept him about as busy twenty-four hours a day as he wanted to be

The Love Gambler

CHAPTER LXII.

Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

IN spite of stern self-chiding, Desiree Leighton was too thankful and happy to succeed in composing herself to sleep before dawn. In consequence she was still slumbering when her father went downtown to his office after breakfast.

When she did awake she lay still for some time musing on what had happened.

The shadow had been lifted from Smith's reputation. She was glad to believe that even her father no longer doubted his chauffeur's innocence, although he had sneered at what he called "love affairs below-stairs" Desiree caught her breath sharply as she recalled that speech. She could not dispute it, yet she resented what she regarded as an injustice on her father's part.

Then she tried to reason the matter out with herself, only to find to her dismay that to this affair that concerned Smith so closely she could not give an unbiased judgment. All she could say to herself was:

"I know he was incapable of anything mean. I knew, whatever happened, that he was a gentleman at heart and in action."

Was she entirely disinterested in these views?

Suddenly and without her will she asked this question

When she tried to answer it she was frightened For she was candid enough to acknowledge to her self her liking for this young man had grown so fast that it had passed beyond her power to check it. She could no longer hide from herself the fact that Smith meant much in her life. During the past two days, when she shrank from seeing him because of the telegram she had sent, the hours had dragged. She was already wondering how soon she might see him again

What would her father say? A sensation of guilt seized her as she remembered how her parent trusted her and how much shocked he would be at the painful interest his daughter felt in the doings of this young chauffeur whom she scarcely knew.

Her remorse annoyed her, but it could not make her drive Smith from her mind. But she did want to follow her father's wishes so far as lay within her power. He had told her to question Annie again. She must do this now, disagreeable as it was to reopen the subject.

She rang her bell and, when the maid appeared at her door, informed her that she would be ready for breakfast in three-quarters-of-an-hour. Then with a fine show of unconcern, she added,

"Oh, by the way, Annie, have you heard from Norah yet?"

"Why, no, ma'am," was the surprised reply. "I'm not expectin' to hear from her. As I told you, me and her ain't on the best of terms."

"What? What is the matter?"

"Well" Annie admitted with evident relish, "it's her temper, ma'am, that makes the trouble"

"Oh—she has a disagreeable temper, I know. Was she ever unkind to you?"

"No, ma'am—not, as you'd say unkind But she did try to do me some mean turns And she an all was threatenin' to get back at folks as crossed her She was that mad at Smith that she said she'd like to kill him—if she dared"

"Ah? Why—what had Smith done?"

Annie giggled. "He hadn't done nothin' ma'am, I guess. That was what riled her She wrote to him screepin' his invitation to go to the movies"

Desiree controlled any outward evidence of the inward start these words produced She recollected perfectly the note in which Norah had invited herself to go to a moving picture show with the good-looking young chauffeur

"Smith never received that note," she remarked quietly

"No, ma'am," Annie rejoined—"so Norah was sayin' But it seems she tried to get him to come to see her or something like that—and he sorter sniled off—and they had some words, but she didn't tell me all the facts. I do guess, ma'am," sinking her voice to a confidential pitch, "that she kinder run after him and that he felt himself above her and sorter run away Anyone with half an eye could see that. But she was mad at him all right! She was always sayin' as how she would get even with him before she finished with him. Then at the very last she said she had."

Desiree sat up in bed eagerly. "What? When did she say that?" she questioned.

"The very last mornin' she was here, please ma'am—right after she had give to Smith that little box for the jeweler—and had come back upstairs"

"Annie—try to recall just what she said," Desiree urged. "I have a reason for asking you to do this It is not idle curiosity—but very important."

"Well, ma'am," the maid explained, pleased to find herself in the position of informant on an interesting point, "she come back upstairs, and when I asked her if Smith treated her polite, she said cross-like—"He did not! But I've fixed him all right! I've got even with him—the beast!' Excuse me, ma'am, for usin' her very words, please."

"Certainly, Annie I am glad you told the truth. I washed it because Norah tried to cast suspicion on Smith—tried to make him seem untrustworthy. Since she has not succeeded, it is as well to let the matter die a natural death So we'll say no more about it"

A Daily Recipe

By MONSIEUR CHARLES A. PERRAUDIN, Delmonico's Chef

Crawfish a la Bateliere

Procure three dozen live crawfish, wash them thoroughly, place them in a net, and plunge them for two minutes into plenty of boiling water in order to kill them. Then remove and break off the small legs. Fry three very finely chopped shallots in butter, with six ounces of minced mushrooms, thyme and bay leaves, add the crawfish and moisten with white wine. Let cook for ten minutes, suppress the thyme and bay leaves, season with salt and red pepper, and when prepared to serve add an ounce of fresh butter and some chopped parsley.

Mrs. Solomon Says---

(Being the Confessions of the Seven-Hundredth Wife)

By HELEN ROWLAND

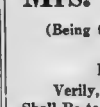
Verily, the Punishment of Woman-Dodger Shall Be to Dwell in Loneliness, All the Days of His Life, Because He Would Not Take a Sporting Chance on Happiness.

Copyright, 1919, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

MY Daughter, a cautious man avoideth many pitfalls, but the True Sportsman wineth all the prizes, and enjoyeth all the thrills.

Now, in the Land of Nod, there dwelt a certain rich man, called Woman-Dodger.

And, because I am a Married Woman, he had no fear of me. He showed me all his gold trophies and his loving-cups and his treasures of the chase, and gave me his confidences. And I perceived that he suffered much weariness of spirit and exceeding great loneliness.



Then I advised him, saying:

"Wherefore, my Son, dost thou not take unto thyself a Wife—even one who would share thy possessions and rejoice in them? For thou art as a barge without a tugboat, a shoe without a mate, a train of cars without an engine. Yes, thou art as one that "marketh time" on the Path of Happiness!"

But he answered me, saying:

"Nay, nay! For damsels are vain and widows are deceitful. And WHERE shall I find a Perfect Woman; even a beauty to charm me, a fashion plate to advertise me, an angel to inspire me, a chum to amuse me, a housewife to minister unto me, and a nurse to comfort me? For nothing LESS shall satisfy me—and I fear to be STUNG!"

Then I pointed to his garage, saying:

"Behold, therein thou keepest a racing car for speed, and a touring car for comfort, a limousine for style, a runabout for amusement, and a flivver for general utility

"Likewise, thou possessest, peradventure, a suit of tweeds for daily use, a suit of white flannel for sportiness, a frock coat for dignity, a lounging robe for comfort, evening clothes for style, and many others for divers purposes.

"Moreover, thou keepest a chauffeur for thy garage, a cook for thy kitchen, a butler for thy dining room, and a valet for thy wardrobe.

"Wherefore, then, and by what magic dost thou think to acquire all the attractions and virtues of seven women in ONE WIFE? Go to! Thou seekest not a Mate, but a Miracle! Not a woman, but an whole harem.

But he shook his head, and defied me, saying:

Woman! Woman' Thine argument is broken against thee! For, it is granted me to possess many servants, many garments and many motor-cars. But WHAT man hath more than one collar button, one tooth brush, and one WIFE—at a time?

"Therefore, until I find the complete and Perfect Combination which I seek I shall continue to remain a single-footer and an artful dodger, and my middle name shall be 'Watch-Your-Step'!"

For I knew that he was a starving man that refuseth a lollipop, because he cannot have an whole handful.

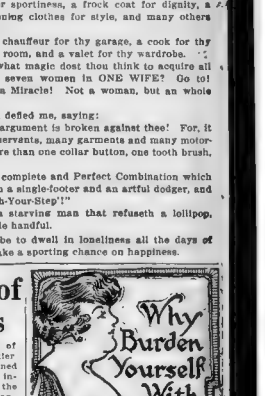
And his punishment shall be to dwell in loneliness all the days of his life, because he would not take a sporting chance on happiness.

Anecdotes of the Famous

Illustrating the distortioness of artists, a story is told of Whistler A certain duke commissioned Whistler to paint his wife and infant son. Whistler began the painting, and after a while announced that no more sittings were required, and the finished work would be sent home in a few days. But days, weeks, months, years passed, and the duke could not get his picture. Finally he caught Whistler at his studio one afternoon, and the painter said, "I find that one more sitting is necessary for the finishing touch. Will you come to my studio one day next week"

"The duchess," said the duke, "will be most happy to give you another sitting. The baby, however, is in the army!"

An excellent story is told of Lord Kenyon, a once famous Judge, who was a favorite with King George the Third, but had a violent temper, and on one occasion made a scene in court by an extraordinary outburst He went to a level-headed friend, and the King took the opportunity, of saying a word in season to him. "My Lord Chief Justice," said His Majesty, "I hear that you have lost your temper, and from my great regard for you I am very glad to learn it. I hope you will find a better one!"



Prominent, responsive fat that comes and stays where it is not needed is a burden; a hindrance to activity, a curtain from pleasure; a thief of all that is pretty and graceful and a menace to womanhood. An Internal Treatment For Piles (Hemorrhoids)

Gives absolute relief from all pain and suffering. Has never failed. Guaranteed.

Many people have become despondent because they have been led to believe that their case was hopeless, and that there was no remedy for their case.

Go to your druggist and get an original bottle of Mire Pile Remedy, the discovery of a clever Ohio chemist, that, taken internally, passes unchanged through the stomach and intestines, and thus reaches the source of the trouble, where, by its soothing, healing, astringetic action, it first allays and then by direct contact with the sores and piles causes them to heal and disappear forever.

It's positively marvelous how speedily it acts. Blessed relief often comes in two or three days, even in cases that have resisted many former home treatments really wonderful results have been accomplished It is one of the wonderful discoveries of recent years and the makers are so confident of its use can have their money refunded, if it fails to rid you of piles forever IMPORTANT—While it is known as a remedy piles are not piles until they cause suffering of the worst, although this condition may accompany a true case of piles For this condition Mire Pile Ointment has been prepared, as in such cases it is not necessary to take the internal prescription.—Advertisement.

BANISH CATARRH

Breathe Hyomei for Two Minutes and Relieve Stuffed-Up Head

If you want to get relief from catarrh, cold in the head, hay fever, irritating cough in the shortest time breathe Hyomei.

It should clean out your head and open up your nose in two minutes and allow you to breathe freely

Hyomei often ends a cold in one day, and brings quick relief from snuffles, hard crusts in the nose, hawking, spitting and catarrh.

Hyomei is made chiefly from a soothing, healing and septic oil, that comes from Eucalyptus forests of Australia, where Catarrh, Asthma, Bronchitis, Tonsilitis, Influenza, Pneumonia and Consumption were never known to exist.

Hyomei is pleasant and easy to breathe Just pour a few drops into the hard rubber inhaler, use as directed and relief is almost certain

Complete Hyomei outfit, including inhaler and one bottle of Hyomei, costs but little, and druggists everywhere If you already own an inhaler you can get an extra bottle of Hyomei at druggists.

A Home Recipe for Wrinkled, Saggy Skin

This famous astringent lotion recommended by many experts for removing wrinkles and for giving flabby skin a firm, clear appearance, is easily prepared at home. Ask your druggist for 2½ ounces of powdered orris root, and add a half pint of witch hazel; dissolve the powder in the witch hazel and bathe the face, neck and hands in the lotion. Results are quick and truly remarkable. The skin tightens as it dries, and it reduces the size of wrinkles or folds almost instantly. Blackheads, sallowness and roughness also become greatly improved after using this lotion. Its effects are much refreshed and exhilarated after using this truly wonderful preparation. Many women look five or ten years younger after using this only a short time.—Advertisement.

New Method Removes Superfluous Hair Roots!

Have you "tried everything" for that annoying hairy or fuzzy growth and about given up in despair? Well, there's just one thing more to try, and you should try it because it is the one home treatment that reaches the very root of such troubles. The new process is not to be compared at all with depilatory, electrical or any other method you've ever heard of. It is different because it actually removes roots and all! You see the roots with your own eyes! Just get a stick of phe-netine from your druggist, follow the simple instructions and you will be delighted with the result. Phelatine is odorless, non-irritating, and can be used with entire safety—you could even eat it with impunity. It is an instantaneous method.—Advertisement.

A Simple Way To Remove Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips

By morning most, if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single scale and trace of it no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—Advertisement.

LOCAL CLERGY INDORSE 'MOVIES'

Methodist Ministers Also Inclined to Regard Dancing in Tolerant Spirit

Boston clergy are fully awake to the value of movies and dancing to cure social unrest among the working classes, but none of them has yet got to writing moving picture scenarios as suggested by Dr. G. Stanley Hall, President of Clark University, of Worcester in a address to the International Conference of Women Physicians in New York.

"Perhaps some day," said Dr. Hall, "Clergymen will realize the possibilities of utilizing instead of prohibiting this form of entertainment and instead of opposing Sunday movies, will set themselves to writing scenarios."

AGREE WITH DR. HALL.

While no instances of scenario-writing have so far been discovered among Boston's clergymen, it would appear that their attitude toward the motion picture is to exact accord with Dr. Hall's suggestion. In fact, the Methodist ministers in charge of activities at Morgan Memorial have made the "movies" a prominent fattor in their work for the past five years. Dancing, while not looked on with unqualified approval, is treated in a broad-minded spirit, as a question for the individual conscience.

"What Dr. Hall advocates we have been practicing for a number of years," declared Rev. C. W. Holden, workers' pastor of Morgan Memorial.

"The community service branch of this institution entertains between 800 and 900 children every Sunday night with selected motion picture films of an educational nature. Not only educational pictures are made a part of the work here, however, for on Friday nights reels of selected films are shown to all who care to attend.

"Our attitude is precisely in accord with that of Dr. Hall. We aim to make the future use of this wonderful invention."

TOLERANT ON DANCING.

Dr. Hall also advocated the utilization of dancing toward the end of producing social content. Rev. Mr. Holden when questioned as to the position taken by the authorities of the Morgan Memorial, which is under the general discipline of the Methodist Church, stated that their attitude was one of toleration rather than encouragement.

"The Methodist Church in this country has declared against this form of amusement," he said, "but the point is not pressed."

That Dr. Hall's intimation that the clergy are inclined to "prohibit" the motion picture is unfounded, at least so far as the Methodist Church is concerned, was made clear by the statement by Rev. Clive F. Norman, associate pastor of the First Methodist Church of Boston, located on Temple street.

IS OPERATOR HIMSELF.

"Not only has Rev. Mr. Gilbert, pastor of this church, been using the motion picture in the social life of the church," stated Rev. Mr. Norman, "but during the Methodist Centenary celebration recently held at Columbus, O., he operated a motion picture machine, for the benefit of the assembled delegates."

Asked as to his position in the matter of dancing, Rev. Mr. Norman replied: "If people are determined to dance, they will dance. They have to learn the effects of the practice for themselves."

A prominent Baptist of this city pointed to the fact that the Baptist Church is using motion pictures in forward fit recently launched campaign for $100,000,000 to carry on missionary and educational work. Asked what was the attitude of the church upon the use of "movies" for purposes of amusement, he replied that this was a question for each individual church to decide for itself.

"The Baptist Church has no centralized authority, and the various congregations must determine these matters in their own way. The same answer applies to the question of dancing. No legislation has been passed one way or the other by the church," he said.

WEDDED 32 YEARS, WIFE SEEKS DIVORCE

New Bedford, Oct. 3—After thirty-two years of married life, Mark Mayhew L. Reed of this city is seeking a divorce from her husband, Albert A. Reed of Little Compton, R. I. They were wedded July 2, 1887. Mrs. Reed complains that her husband treated her with cruelty on November 26, 1918, and deserted her a year later.

UNION FAVORS FREE SUNDAY MOVIE SHOWS

New Bedford, Oct. 3—Opposition to the Sunday opening of theatres here was expressed by a vote of the Weavers' Union executive board, representing several thousand mill workers. The board favored free motion picture entertainments in the public schools on Sundays.

MINISTERS are urged by Rev. Dr. G. Stanley Hall to seize upon the movie as an instrument of uplift, and this is Artist Moynahan's conception of what will happen when they do.

LONG ATTACKS ADVISERS OF COOLIDGE

Charges They Are Solicitous for Interests of Railway Wreckers and Jobbers

Governor Coolidge's advisers were attacked as being solicitous for the interests of stock jobbers and railway wreckers whose interests were insured in the Boston Elevated bill, by Richard H. Long, Democratic candidate for Governor.

Mr. Long held rallies at Holyoke and Springfield, following a tour with other candidates through Berkshire county.

Discussing the alleged railway wreckers, he said that further raids on the people's pockets were planned in proposed dealings with other bankrupt roads.

Mr. Long condemned the $100 soldiers' bonus as being too small and said that several other American States had surpassed Massachusetts in recognition of services rendered.

He said that if elected Governor there would be a change in the attitude toward the striking railway men. The strike of the railway companies against giving service which the travelling public suffers and which now have to endure, with no friend in high places to take their part, will be broken, he declared.

GOVERNOR BETTER, WILL GO TO STATE CONVENTION

Governor Coolidge is sufficiently improved to sit up for a short time. It was announced from his office at the State House that he would probably not be able to attend the banquet of the Republican Club or the reception to the Republican party candidates to be held at the Brunswick Hotel tonight, but that he would undoubtedly be able to attend the Republican State convention on Saturday.

TWO-THIRDS OF STRIKING WAITRESSES GO BACK

Leominster, Oct. 3—There is dissension in the ranks of the three striking waitresses at Joe Fong's Chinese restaurant, and two of the three returned to work after a holdout of nearly a week. Miss Celia Knowles, the third member of the union, did not go back, and she claims if was agreed when the three walked out last week that all of them would return unless all three were re-engaged.

ROXBURY BOY HURT BY FATHER'S WAGON

While attempting to climb on his father's wagon at Columbia road and Quincy street, Roxbury, Robert White, aged eighteen year, slipped and fell, the rear wheel going over both of his legs. He was taken to the City Hospital in a passing auto. White lives at No. 1 Puritan avenue, Dorchester. His condition is not serious.

ATTORNEY IS CHARGED WITH PROFITEERING

Lawrence, Oct. 3—James A. Dowd, A Lawrence lawyer, is defendant in a petition hearing brought by Frank O'Brien, a local business man. The claim is made that the attorney failed to make the proper accounting of affairs in relation to the collection of money for the plaintiff. The claim is made also that an excessive rate was charged for the services rendered. A lively tilt ensued when questions about prices were asked by the plaintiff's attorney. Blame the Lawrence Bar Association," said Lawyer Dowd. "I don't fix the prices on legal services."

Hard Fights Teach Mr. Wood How to Run His Mills

William M. Wood is the president of the largest woolen manufactory in the country, located at the city of Lawrence, Massachusetts. He has passed through several very severe contests with his workingmen during the last few years, and in each of them the workingmen have been victorious. After the first defeat he apparently learned no lesson, but after the second defeat his native intelligence seems to have come to his rescue.

Immediately after the ending of the recent bitter labor struggle at Lawrence Mr. Wood set about formulating plans for a better understanding with the men in his factory, and it is said that he called in those three brave clergymen who led the struggle of the workmen, to give such assistance as they could toward establishing a general peace. If the report is true, undoubtedly he obtained their co-operation, both as men and as clergymen, for as intellectual men they understood that the normal and healthy condition is peace and not strife, and as clergymen their special training teaches them to promote peace.

At any rate Mr. Wood began to seek ways and means for establishing an ENTENTE CORDIALE between himself and the men and women in his factory, and last Monday he addressed his foremen and overseers upon the subject, explaining to them that the one certain way of combatting the extremely radical propaganda among the employes was to give them no just grievances.

This is an excellent sign in Mr. Wood and an excellent sign, we hope, of the times. It is the more honor to Mr. Wood that he has taken this position at the end of a hard fight when he was beaten. It really requires more moral courage and character to take a licking and smile over it and make the most of it and keep your poise than it requires courage to do almost anything else.

If Mr. Wood has nothing up his sleeve and is sincere, as he seems to be, we predict a long period of peace in his mills. He is absolutely right that the one sure way to keep peace and prevent the dangerous reception of revolutionary propaganda is to give workmen no reasonable grievances. Of course, it is true that in every large body of men there will be many who would not be satisfied with heaven, but would want a gold chain around it. But the great majority of men are reasonable and patient and very much more inclined to let well enough alone and to accept the status quo than perhaps is good for them. Therefore, if they have no reasonable grievances their state of mind is sterile soil in which to plant the seeds of active discontent.

In the course of Mr. Wood's remarks to his overseers he said that we need more production, a speeding up of the wheels of industry to get an increasing wage. This also is true. We do need to speed up production, especially the kind of speeding up which does away with sabotage and loafing on the job if it exists. Mr. Wood says that every slacker on the job increases the cost of living and that "the day is coming when the working people will see this, and the slacker will be looked upon with contempt." Mr. Wood is absolutely right.

The president of the American Woolen Company concludes with an appeal to the employes to interest themselves in the new plan, because it cannot succeed unless they do become interested. In this, of course, Mr. Wood is right and the American earnestly hopes that the men will investigate the plan and if they find that it is an honest, earnest plan to reach an understanding with them we hope that they will meet it halfway and not be too suspicious if all their ideas are not met. No one ever gets all he wants in this world. But if the bating average is good it certainly becomes a good working basis for an understanding, and certainly nothing else is worth while.

Public Spirit of A. P. Loring

Augustus P. Loring is an unopposed candidate for re-election to the Senate from the Second Essex District.

Mr. Loring is one of the interesting characters in our local public life. He is a man of large means with an environment that camouflages its sloth, ignorance and lack of public spirit by an affectation of contempt for politicians and political life. But Mr. Loring has entered politics and has become a politician. Judged by the character of his first public service in the Constitutional Convention, he was moved by a real public spirit. Few would have guessed that fate had ordained the most radical and novel feature of the Initiative and Referendum amendment to be born of the fair-mindedness of a man like Augustus P. Loring.

A gentleman from State street, highly excited at the news, called up a representative of the American on the day that Mr. Loring aided in the grafting upon the Initiative and Referendum amendment the new feature and said:

Who is this red revolutionist? They tell me it is old man Loring?

It was not without much amusement that we assured the dismayed and horrified gentleman from State street that the "red revolutionist" was really Augustus P. Loring, Esq., who, we assured our friend, was really a very decent sort of person in spite of his revolutionary disposition.

Mr. Loring's services in the convention have been by no means confined to the aid he gave in perfecting the Initiative and Referendum Amendment, that great instrument of democracy which many of those who fought it hardest will yet call blessed. In the State Senate Mr. Loring has been active, well advised and liberal. He has given every indication of being a man of moderate counsel, who believes in living and letting live.

The more Augustus P. Lorings we have the better, even if we cannot agree with him more than 50 per cent. of the time.

DON'T ASK OTHERS TO DO YOUR THINKING

Don't call in another to help you till you have exhausted your own resources.

It is possible that you have become so accustomed to asking aid for every little thing that it has become almost impossible for you to get right down to work and hard thinking in order to get out of your difficulties.

If this is your way of doing things it is safe to say that you always try, at home or abroad, to get someone else to help you out of trouble.

At home you pass things up to your wife and get angry with her if she proposes that you use some of your own gray matter to the family advantage.

You don't want your wife to annoy you with questions which come up in the home—your plea is that you are too busy all day—but don't you know concentrated effort and thought for her puts you in line for more controlled thought at the office?

Your private affairs will not run themselves and you should do your share in helping to solve them with careful thought.

Go!

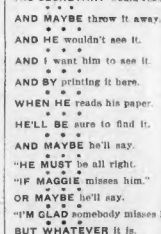
By K. C. B.

DEAR K. C. B.—This is Wednesday morning and I have missed you from the back page of the American. Mr. Hearst has crowded you off, and while I admire him greatly and read with much interest his splendid article, won't you please drop in and tell him that when you fail to appear we miss you very much. Sincerely yours,

MARGARET M. MILLER.

MY DEAR Margaret.
FIRST OF all.
WHEN I got your letter.
I THOUGHT I'd take it in.
AND SHOW it to Mr. Hearst.
AND MAYBE say to him.
"YOU CERTAINLY messed things up.
"WHEN YOU left me out.
"SEE WHAT Maggie says."
AND THEN I remembered.
HE WAS very busy.
AND HAD a lot to do.
AND BESIDE that.
IT WASN'T very often.
THAT HE crowded me out.
AND HE owned the paper.
AND HE should worry.
AND WHO was I.
THAT I should complain.
WHEN I got my pay.
WHETHER I'M in or not.
AND EVERY day.
THAT THEY leave me out.
MEANS ONE more day.
THAT I don't have to work.
AND THE Lord knows, Maggie.
THAT IT'S hard enough.
TRYING TO be cheerful.
WHEN YOU'VE just found out.
THAT THE reason the engine.
IN YOUR automobile.
WAS POUNDING so hard.
WAS BECAUSE the oil pump.
HAD CEASED to work.
AND YOU had to lay it up.
AND LET them take it to pieces.
AND IT would cost a lot.
AND YOU hadn't figured on it.
AND YOU had a date.
TO GO into the country.
AND YOU couldn't go.
AND IT'S the first of the month.
AND THE bills are coming in.
AND I'M writing all this.
JUST TO fill up space.
BECAUSE THE way it is, Maggie.
IF I sent your letter.
IN TO Mr. Hearst.
HIS SECRETARY would read it.
AND MAYBE throw it away.
AND HE wouldn't see it.
AND I want him to see it.
AND BY printing it here.
WHEN HE reads his paper.
HE'LL BE sure to find it.
AND MAYBE he'll say.
"HE MUST be all right.
"IF MAGGIE misses him."
OR MAYBE he'll say.
"I'M GLAD somebody misses him."
BUT WHATEVER it is.
HE'LL KNOW I'm working.
AND ATTRACTING attention.



I THANK you.

The U. S. S. Casey

By John B. Kennedy

(The United States Shipping Board has decided to launch, this month, a ship named "Casey" in recognition of the splendid war record of the Knights of Columbus.—News Item.)

THAT'S Neptune saluting with a brogue
As the good ship Casey puts to sea,
And the old sea serpent, the artful rogue,
Is wearing his tail where his head should be,
Or else it's his head where his tail belongs,
But what does it matter to you and me?
It's just his manner of singing songs
Of rollicking hope and glorious glee
When the good ship Casey goes to sea.

Oh, yo, heave ho, and a crème de menthe,
And three brave sailors out on a spree!
There'd be more to be said if they hadn't dropped dead
When the good ship Casey put to sea.

THE moon is shining abaft the swell
As the ocean smites the Casey's prow,
And the lad in the nest sings "All is well!"
And the wind moans by like a Kerry cow.
Oh, there will be joy in old Armagh,
And many a jumping jest there'll be
When the gals all gather from near and far
To test their smiles on the likes of me,
When the good ship Casey goes to sea.

Oh, yo, heave ho, and some navy twist,
And steer the helm to bite the lee.
There's a Galway girl who will fit an earl
When the good ship Casey goes tossea.

WHEN the weather is foul and the air is thick
With the curses and prayers of the sailormen,
When other ships crack the Casey will stick;
Oh, the old K-C's in its glory, then.
It stands for a crowd who are full of fight
When light is needed to guard a key.
They are gentlemen when the game is right,
And that is just as the case should be
When the good ship Casey goes to sea.

Oh, yo, heave ho, and a K-C fag
For the crew of the captain's gig, say we!
For Lloyd's, we think, will employ green ink
When the good ship Casey goes to sea.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Railroad Questions

Editor Boston American:

In regard to the proposed changes recommended by the United States Railroad Administration, I, as a commuter, object for the following reasons.

1. What right has it to designate the means of transportation that the Boston commuters shall take? Don't the commuters pay taxes? Aren't they citizens? Haven't they any rights? Don't they make Boston what it is?

2. What are the railroads for if not to carry the passengers? What did they erect stations in the suburbs for if they didn't intend to use them? Who will travel on the railroads if the passengers all go to the Elevated? And, why shouldn't all have the privileges if a few have? Why do we have railroads?

3. How long will Boston be a first-class city if it hasn't a terminal to satisfy the demands of the people? Boston has already drooped to sixth place in the list of largest cities in the United States. Shall this go on? When New York needed a new terminal it erected the Grand Central Station. Why can't Boston? Does the Elevated own the railroads, so that it is able to dictate how many passengers they shall take? If not, why does it have such a control over them?

BALD-HEADED EAGLE MAY SOON BE EXTINCT

By Garrett P. Serviss

THE bald-headed eagle, the emblem of our country, is in peril of extermination! That is not a fact to be regarded with complaisance by Americans. The eagle and the flag are sacred symbols of our nationality, of our individuality and independence as a people. Ideals must have visible, tangible representatives in order to hold possession of the popular mind and heart. Cæsar might not have conquered Gaul and won the mastery of the world without the Roman eagles, for which the legions would die to the last man.

Many other nations have made the eagle emblematic, but the American "Bird of Freedom," with "storm-daring pinion and sun-gliancing eye," is differentiated from the others, which, unlike him, have usually stood for tyranny instead of liberty. He differs specifically from the eagles of the old world as Americans differ from Europeans and Asiatics. He is native to the air of the American continent.

Sentimental Aspect

The American eagle to be exterminated! God forbid. I remember, as if it had occurred only yesterday, the throbbing and almost reverencing interest with which I looked upon the first living bald eagle that my eyes had ever seen—the eagle of the coins, the eagle of the flagstaff, the eagle of the poems, the eagle whose broad, protecting wings spread like a roof over the whole width of the Declaration of Independence hanging on the school-room wall. I felt, I suppose, as a savage would feel upon encountering alive the totemic emblem of his tribe.

The American eagle must be kept alive, not in captivity, which he disdains, but in the freedom to which he was born and which he symbolizes for a hundred million people on this continent and for uncounted other millions elsewhere.

But what are the facts? "The places outside Alaska," says Professor W. G. Van Name, "where eagles can still safely breed are very few." Yet the Alaskan territorial government has a law putting a bounty on the head of every eagle found in the territory! Why? Because the birds destroy a few domesticated animals which are not properly guarded. The loss from this source, I am credibly informed, has been greatly exaggerated by those who procured the passage of the law of extermination. And if it be not exaggerated surely the American people could well afford to spare a few dollars from the national treasury to pay for an occasional feast of the untamed eagle.

It was in 1917 that the anti-eagle law of Alaska went into operation, and in less than two years, says the authority quoted above, "about 5,600 of these birds, which must be a large percentage of the entire number inhabiting North America, have been killed for fifty cents each, and the slaughter is still going on."

Reason for War on Eagles

The eagle is famous for its long life, while its childhood period, like that of a man, is also extended, as a result of which the parent birds have to care for their young during so many months that the same pair cannot raise more than one brood in a year. Under the present unfavorable circumstances, too, only one or two individuals are raised out of each brood, so that without any killing by law the birds would be unable to hold their own. Professor Van Name thinks it probable that a large proportion of the eagles now living were raised many years ago when the conditions of breeding were much more favorable.

It needs but little reflection to perceive the origin of this war on the eagles. It grows out of the utilitarian, profiteering and materialistic spirit which at present sweeps the decks. It is the same spirit which leads one race of men to say to another, "My civilizations is superior to yours (because it suits me better); I want to expand and you are in my way; therefore, get off the planet!"

PARISIAN STAR TELLS OF WONDERFUL VISION

The most-admired star of the Parisian stage became a nun. All Paris was somewhat shocked when it became known that beautiful LaValliere had taken holy orders. Now LaValliere has made public the story of the vision which came to her—a vision which contrasted the luxuries of her life and the miseries of the poor so sharply that she was unable to continue her mode of living. Her story, with illustrations, appears in the next

Why Women Die
A Hole in the Earth
One King's Mistake
Quick Alcoholic Poison

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1919.

Men kill themselves after disgrace, women kill themselves beforehand, to prevent disgrace. The Associated Press says that drug stores in Archangel, where American soldiers are sent to fight, Heaven knows why, are openly selling poisons to girls. The girls kill themselves to avoid falling into the hands of the Bolsheviki.

Different kinds of women have different ideas on disgrace. These Russian girls die to avoid what they consider immorality.

Cleopatra having led for years a life that you couldn't praise, killed herself to avoid what she called disgrace, being dragged through the streets in a Roman triumph. It was that, not the fate of Marc Antony, that worried her.

Throughout the Middle West the Aurora Borealis causes wire trouble. Northern lights stretched across the sky night before last from New York to Omaha, the little electric forces running along telegraph wires which became demoralized by that display of the big electric brother in the sky.

This earth is a gigantic driving wheel, inexhaustible source of power which tiny men know not how to use. Years ago, this writer compared human beings to microbes living on the rim of a great driving wheel, building little windmills for power, instead of using the power in the wheel. It was suggested then that men should sink into the earth shafts running down several miles to the hot interior fires. Pour down water and let it come up out of another hole, turned into live steam, thus tapping inexhaustible power.

That suggestion to many readers seemed remote, not to say ridiculous. But now Sir Charles Parsons, president of a great British scientific association, most eminent electrical and motive engineer, and inventor of the oil turbine, says: "By boring a hole in the earth's surface twelve miles in depth enough energy would be discovered to furnish all the motive power of the world."

While the supply of fuel is giving out the terrific energy of volcanic eruptions tells of the unused power and heat beneath our feet.

To dig such a hole as Sir Charles Parsons now advises and such hole as was suggested years ago by this writer, would cost, says Sir Charles, only twenty-five million dollars, the cost to England of one day's war.

To obtain an equal amount of power, "by harnessing the water supply of the world, would cost forty-seven billions." It would be cheap to dig the hole and make the experiment. A few such holes or power mines would solve the coal mining problem, heat cities, run machinery and allow coal to remain in the ground unused, as we allow the winds, unused to blow over the ocean, ships using the better power of steam.

Good King Albert of Belgium is here, is welcome and will discover that many distinguished citizens of this country are not undemocratic to be fond of a king. He and his wife will witness some amusing imitation "courtesies" by women, and the King will be called almost everything from "King" to "Sir."

The King is very grateful to this country for what it has done, more grateful, perhaps, for what it is expected to do. A big loan for Belgium is planned in his honor. Gratitude, you know, is looking forward to something else.

Somebody amid the rejoicing should tell the King that he was foolishly advised when he said he would not visit Chicago or Milwaukee because those cities were "too pro-German."

In Europe are many graves filled by men of Chicago and Milwaukee. They helped in a job too big for the King and his allies.

Chicago and Milwaukee, in proportion to population and wealth, did as much as any cities in the United States to supply money as well as men that helped the Belgian King out of trouble.

Nine at least are killed, more will die, in Arkansas' latest race riot. State rioting started in an attempt to arrest a negro bootlegger, selling poisonous whiskey.

This is coming in the effort to stamp out the illegal sale of alcoholic poison. The thing must be done, whatever it may cost. So-called whiskey sold now to whoever will buy, is in reality a deadly poison. This incident was witnessed by the writer yesterday. A man, sober, drove an ice wagon to the door of a saloon on an important thoroughfare. He entered, came out in a few minutes, staggered, seized a lamp post, fell on his back and lay unconscious. It had not taken long to settle him.

Government for years shamefully made itself partner of the whiskey sellers, sharing their profits. It will have a big bill to pay before it can undo and prevent the work of the new poison whiskey that is being made all over the country.
